Attacking Railroad Surveyors.

PARSONS, KAS., May 7.—Word has reached here that the surveyors on the Muskogee and Fort Smith branch of the Missouri Pacific have been driven off by the Cherokees. Assistant Attorney Kelso, of this city, upon the order of General Manager Talmage, left last night for the scene of the difficulty. The Indians are reported determined. It is not doubted that the Missouri Pacific folks will assert their right to build the road.

The late rains have greatly benefitted the crops, which were never better in this section. The wheat is immense.

Advice to Country Butter Buyers.

Country dealers should impress upon their minds the importance of buying very carefully and make only two grades—choice, which would include all fine made butter, sweet and uniform in color, and common, which should include all streaked stock, for no matter if sweet and fresh made it must be classed with the lower grades.—[Harker & Pritchard's Price Current.

IN DANGER.

Venice Nearly Swamped by the Cut in Madison Levee.

A Midnight Alarm and a Sortie With Shotguns, Pistols, Etc.

The Water Receding Along the Levee—East St. Louis Out of Danger—Carondelet.

The river has been behaving itself to-day, and has partially fulfilled the prophecies made about a fall. Nearly everybody has his own gauge, and all of them read differently, but the general opinion was that the water was receding at the rate of at least one inch every two hours. Parties who took measurements at the foot of Market before 9 a. m. declared that the decline between 7 and 8:30 a. m. was an even inch and a half. Later in the day the same favorable circumstances prevailed, and the general expression was "It's over now until the June rise comes down."

The levee and the bridge were crowded with sight-seers all day. The scene along the wharf is an interesting one and people who had been waiting until to-morrow rushed down in droves when the news of the fall began to be talked about. The abatement of the water is not yet such as to be noticed, and the river in all its glory remains to be looked upon. Towards the southern end of the levee the water has done little additional damage. In North St. Louis the situation remains unchanged. Schulenberg & Boeckler have now several feet of water among their lumber piles, which they have been defending all along with an embankment nearly 600 feet long. This is caused by the breaking of the sewer. Workmen were engaged on the break this morning, and if the river does not raise everything is safe. At East St Louis no immediate danger is feared, and the break in the Madison County levee, recorded yesterday may prevent any further damage.

AT VENICE.

The people in this settlement are still much worked up over the cutting of the Madison County levee. A POST-DISPATCH reporter visited the scene of the cut this morning and found the water pouring through a seventy-five foot gap with alarming rapidity. It has spread over all the lowlands to the east and south and has entirely submerged the farming lands of the parties mentioned in yesterday's POST DISPATCH.

The damage is tremendous and can hardly be estimated, but those best posted put it at $500,000. On the heels of the scare came another excitement last night. About 7:30 p. m. a man rushed wildly into Venice and announced in front of Squire Robinson's that "Reynolds is cutting the levee in front of his place." Reynolds is the man who occupies Irwin Z. Smith's, farm, a quarter of a mile east of the river on the Edwardsville Rock Road. The water which has been let in by the break in the Madison County levee about two miles above had gradually worked over through the slashes until it had run over a considerable part of Reynolds' wheat fields, and was slowly traversing the ditch on the north side of the Edwardsville road in front of the farm. A small private road has been erected from the main road into the farm, and this was damming the water in the ditch and throwing it back on Reynolds' ground. Theodore Selbe, together with Mr. Reynolds and his two sons, dug a trench through this little road for the purpose of turning the water into the slash, which runs south of the school house, thence down to the levee leading to Venice. Just as they had finished the cut the alarm was brought to Venice. A party consisting of Jake Walters, John Richardson, Jim Hinkert, Tom Hicks, Wm. Roberts, Walter Bain, Pat Crotie and others immediately armed themselves with shot guns, revolvers, etc., and rushed to the place indicated. All the men live in the northeastern part of Venice, on the west edge of the Smith farm, and are in danger of being ultimately flooded out if the water should rush in the hollows in unprecedented volume. Around at the gate of the farm they found the road cut, and the water flowing through. They dammed it up, piled earth on top and left men on watch all night to see that nobody interfered with the place. Reynolds claimed that Selb and Ogleston, two of the teamsters of Venice, had authorized him to make the cut; but this was disputed and several angry and excited discussions took place.

This morning the water from the break of yesterday had run completely over the little road down the inclines east and north of the school house, and was rapidly pouring towards Venice. It was also crossing the county road just above this obstacle and was rapidly spreading over the wheat fields on the south side. A couple of men were set to work, and the obstruction was cut completely away, but the water continued to cross the Rock road, and the probability is the latter will be cut in two before to-morrow. If this happens all communication will be cut off between Venice and points further east, the Edwardsville road being the only medium of communication

The water is also running down the ditch at the southern extremity of the road. The school house was on an island before 10 a. m., and the water had run far down towards the levee. Venice is not in immediate danger, as there are a great many hollows to be filled up before the water reaches the town. There is danger, however, that the flood may swoop down, and run on the north side of the Smith farm, and engulf the eastern edge of the little town from this direction.

A dispatch was received at Venice this morning stating that the levee at Madison was intact and that there was no danger. Men were at work at the break in Chouteau Slough all night. Sacks and straw were sent up from Venice and the gap will be repaired before night.

At Brooklyn the negroes are huddled together in the dry part of the town. The breaking of the road leading out from the Smith farm cuts off the only way of escape which the Brooklynites had. If the overflow continues, the negroes will be cut off completely.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

The East St. Louisans are rejoiced over the receding waters and believe that all danger is past. The best work done during the high water was at the Douglass School under the directions of Capt. Sackman, Renshaw, Trendley, Mr. O'Brien and others, who worked like Trojans. Between the Vandalia and Ohio and Mississippi railroad tracks, the levee and a small ridge just west of the Douglass School, which is situated two blocks from the levee, over one hundred families live on the low level. On the east of this ridge of ground is the slovgh, which is now a portion of Cahokia Creek. When the waters began to raise the danger of flooding out these hundred families was imminent. The slough was already at the top of the ridge when the work was begun.

This ridge extends about 350 yards north and south between the railroad yards. In twenty-four hours the water came up over three feet and the work was up hill. The earth was not available and the force of men was small. By digging from the west base of the ridge and depositing the earth on the top they succeeded in keeping slightly above the level of the water. The sand was then dug from the middle of the street and the excavation along the west side of the ridge filled with this, while the dyke was built up slowly but steadily. By great vigilance and hard work the water was kept out and a barrier to the water, six feet high, was erected. Had this not been done the water would have washed in and doubtless swept through the levee, the east side of which is nothing but sand.

This morning the dwellings were perfectly secure from all danger, and the gentlemen who exercised themselves so vigorously shoveling clay for the last four days look on the result with much satisfaction. At the head of the island all the railroad tracks are out of water and the freight business is progressing uninterrupted. At the break near the gas works the water is pouring in, but the Cahokia is carrying it off.

THE NORTH MARKET STREET BREAK.

A report was industriously circulated early this morning that the dyke built by the Schulenburg & Boeckler Lumber Company, north from the foot of North Market street, had parted at the sewer hole near the ferry landing. A POST-DISPATCH reporter visited the place and found that while no breach has been made in the top of the embankment the water is coming through rapidly at the bottom. It can be seen boiling up a few feet away from the dyke inside the protected yards at a rate which will cause trouble if not checked, and as the breach is under water on both sides it will be extremely difficult to reach it. Schulenburg & Boeckler have about sixty thousand dollars worth of lumber along the river bank protected, most of it by a system of double dykes. One pile of their lumber is out in the water protected only by a boom. Even if this goes, however, the loss will not be heavy. The outer yards are covered with water to a depth of over two inches. The level of the water outside is almost four feet higher than this, and the dyke is by no means a strong ono, much of it being simply a lot of garbage strung out in a long malodorous line.

NORTH ST. LOUIS.

The water still continues to recede. The St. Louis saw mill of Lebkle & Schrage, at Second and Buchanan streets, resumed this morning. The Knapp, Stout & Co. Company are making a desperate struggle to keep their yards clear of water, which is still flowing in through the sewer inlets. The run of the water has been partly stopped, but it is thought before it can be permanently stopped that it will fill up in the yards until it becomes on a level with the river, and then pumps will be put to work to throw it out.

The only industries now closed by the high water is the bone mills of the Meyer Bros. and planing, mill of A. Schultz, Hall and Dock streets, and before work can be resumed the river will have to decline 2½ feet.

THE LEVEE TO-DAY.

At the foot of Cherry street crowded closely together are the Dora, Josephine, Phil. Chappell and Calhoun and a very busy scene is presented. They are not yet able to load and unload at their accustomed places. The saloon at 611 and the St. Louis Laundry at 613 North Levee, from which the occupants were driven by the flood, are this morning being cleared out and fitted for business again. By gauges kept at the foot of Morgan street it is shown that the water has fallen three inches during the past twenty-four hours. The first floor of P. P. Manion's Blacksmithing and Wrecking Co., which yesterday was covered with water, is visible again this morning. It is still impossible for footmen to pass along the levee from Cherry to St. Charles street, but south of that, by the aid of a few planks and bricks, a passage can be effected. Ward & Brady, who have for several days been obliged to occupy the second story of their building, are this morning at work on the ground floor. The water which at its height stood five inches on their floor, has now retreated about four feet down the sidewalk from their door. People from St. Charles street to Olive street, whom the flood drove aloft, are to-day occupying their places again. Further south the condition of the levee has not materially changed since yesterday.

CARONDELET.

The river has fallen nearly six inches since yesterday noon. The little sheds and shanties along the river bank that have been covered are becoming visible above the water. In the yards of all the large business places between St. Louis and Carondelet men are busily engaged in saving the fences and other material inclined to float away with the water. The fall, in order to allow the resumption of business in all the large shops along the river bank, must be at least six feet. Business men are hopeful that such a decline will take place in a few days. The Iron Mountain trestle work, near the water edge, has shown such an inclination to become shaky that it has been deemed advisable to suspend all traffic over them for a short time. Another one of Anthony & Kuhn's ice houses is in a critical condition and is likely to succumb to the pressure of the water if a rapid decline does not take place in the next twenty-four hours. Rock and gravel have been deposited near the foundation to prevent it from being washed away, and the sides are prevented from spreading by means of braces. All the ice is being rapidly transferred to one of the new houses, so that should the worst fears be realized the building would be the only loss. Another foot or two of a rise could in no way affect the business interests of Carondelet that have not been submerged. Yesterday the water had encroached upon that portion of the Vulcan works which contains the gas producers, but as the fires are about four feet higher than that portion of the building the works were in no immediate danger. This morning the water was about four inches lower in the Vulcan neighborhood than at noon yesterday.

EAST CARONDELET,

All of the inhabitants of East Carondelet, with the exception of about 100, have abandoned the town. Only a dozen houses remain on dry land, and they were in danger of submersion till the water began receding. The new cradle of the Conlogue line has been carried away by the water, and the embankment is so weakened in several places that no trains could be run. The Narrow Guage Line have a gang of men at work repairing their tracks where the water washed under them. The refugees continue to leave their homes for this side of the river, and many of them are living in box cars and tents. The back-water is falling rapidly this morning, and many of the houses that suffered least will be habitable in a few days.

Indications.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The Controversy Over Carlyle's Reminiscences.

Cablegrams From England, France, Ireland, Germany and Elsewhere.

England.

LONDON, May 7.—In the Commons last night a motion was agreed to that the House thinks something should be done to improve the dwellings of laborers in Ireland, Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, stating that if the Government could see any way of proposing anything to effect the object of the motion in the land bill it would gladly do so.

THE GREEK FRONTIER QUESTION.

Dilke, Under Foreign Secretary, replying to an attack by Ellis Ashmead Bartlett on the Government's foreign policy, incidentally stated that the settlement of the Greek frontier question was due to the understanding arrived at between Goschen and Bismarck, which led to the united action of Germany and England.

THE CARLYLE SQUABBLE.

Carlyle's niece writes to the Times in reply to the letter of James Froude relative to the publication of Carlyle's reminiscences. She says Froude's reference to hidden reasons for action have awakened a curiosity which he can now hardly refuse to satisfy. Her letter concludes as follows: "If Froude would but surrender the papers now to be examined and decided upon by three friends of Carlyle, it would be in accordance with his obvious intention as expressed in his will, and would be joyfully accepted by every member of the Carlyle family."

GLADSTONE.

LONDON, May 7.—Gladstone is improving, but will go to the country for a short rest.

THE OATH ACT.

LONDON, May 7.—The Conservatives in the Commons will resist the first reading of the bill for the amendment of the parliamentary oath act and also take a division against it on its second reading.

THE VATICAN.

The Times says: We understand that there is a strong desire at the Vatican for some direct authoritative means of communication with England with a view of gaining more authentic knowledge on the social questions, especially those connected with Ireland.

TRADE RETURNS.

LONDON, May 7.—The British Board of Trade returns for April show a decrease of £5,379,703 in the value of imports as compared with the same month last year, and a decrease of £1,493,029 in the value of exports.

ENDORSING THE GOVERNMENT.

LONDON, May 7.—A letter from the Most Rev. Thos. W. Craik, Archbishop of Cashel, is published, in which he says: I cannot approve the action which the Irish party are said to contemplate to exhibit their sense of loyalty to Dillon and reprehension for his arrest. An overwhelming majority of the Irish people are in favor of giving the Government a fair chance of passing the land bill.

France.

PARIS, May 7.—St. Hiliare, Minister of Foreign Affairs, has informed the Budget Committee that the impending conflict with the Kroumirs would end the military part of the Tunis difficulty, and would be succeeded by diplomatic action. France he said was bound to protect her interests by imposing a substantial condition on the Bey.

Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 7.—A ukase will be published Saturday (to-day) or Sunday lessening the rent to which peasants are liable for lands from thirty to sixty-five per cent. This will apply to the thirteen Northern Governments. There will be other measures of amelioration for the South. The expectrtions of a Constitution are probably chimerical.

Germany.

BERLIN, May 7.—The performance of the second part of Wagner's "Nibelungen Trilogy" was even more successful than the first. The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany have sent a special message of congratulation to Wagner, who was cheered on leaving by the crowds of people on the streets.

Austro-Hungary.

VIENNA, May 7—The Prince of Wales and the Prince and Princess William of Prussia arrived this morning to be present at the marriage of Rudolph and Stephanie.

Ireland.

LONDON, May 7.—A man named Levy, a relative of O'Donovan Ross, has been arrested in Dublin under the coercion act.

SPRING WHEAT.

The Prospects Encouraging and Exceedingly Good Throughout the Western States.

CHICAGO, May 7.—The Times has two pages of reports of the spring wheat prospects. Its analysis says the situation of affairs is satisfactory, indeed it may be to said be highly encouraging for the best reports come from localities where most of the spring wheat is raised, and for the most part the least encouraging reports are from sections where winter wheat has been found the more profitable. In Minnesota, Nebraska and Dakota, which are almost wholly given up to spring wheat, there is a largely increased acreage, and the prospect is thoroughly good. In Minnesota, which raised over 40,000,000 bushels of wheat last year, the reports are uniformly of the most flattering character. In some of the lower counties the acreage has doubled and the average increase for the State is twenty or thirty per cent. At the same time the condition is usually stated to have never been better and sometimes never to have been so good. The prospects on increased yield per acre is good from Nebraska, which produced about a fourth as much wheat last year as Minnesota, but whose prairies are rapidly being broken up by the great army of emigrants who are constantly pouring into the State. The reports are very similar. The acreage is increased and planting has been accomplished under the most favorable conditions. The farmers take a cheerful view of things, and the probabilities are in favor of an exceptionally large harvest. In Dakota, also, the area devoted to spring wheat is also much increased and the indications are all favorable for a generous yield. From Kansas the reports are not quite so favorable as to quality, though the prospects are generally fair to good, and the acreage is reduced. This, however, is mainly due to the fact that winter wheat is in that State supplanting spring sowing. In Missouri also fall sowing prevails. No more than one-tenth of the wheat raised there this year will be spring sown. The condition of the spring grain is not altogether satisfactory and in some localities it is poor but this is not true of all and the small amount of spring wheat raised makes its quality of subordinate importance. In Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa the condition of the spring wheat ranges all the way from good to very poor. The acreage in general is much reduced. It is to be believed, however, that in some portions of Northern Illinois the prospects are good, and that in the central and southern parts of the State winter wheat is rapidly crowding out spring wheat where it has not already done it. Where the acreage of spring wheat is largely reduced it is generally because the farmers have found the fall is better than spring sowing. In Iowa there is a substantial reduction on the acreage of spring wheat in almost every county, but in the vicinity of Storm Lake the increased acreage amounts to twenty per cent. The condition was never better. Throughout the State there has been a considerable dimunition in the spring wheat acreage, the result in some localities of a preference for winter wheat. Taking the Northwest as a whole the prospects for spring wheat in Minnesota, Nebraska and Dacota, where spring wheat is almost exclusively raised, are all that could be desired. In Kansas and Illinois the spring wheat forms but a small part of the total crop. In Wisconsin and Iowa the decreased acreage of spring wheat is caused in a greater or less degree by the preference of farmers for winter grain, and this it should be remembered is from 68 to 72 per cent of the total wheat crop of the United States.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

An Engine and Ten Cars Fall Through a Burning Bridge.

CHICAGO, May7.—A private dispatch received here says a freight engine and ten cars went through a bridge on the Green Bay and Minnesota Railroad between Elm Lake and Dexterville, Wisconsin, this morning. The bridge had been set on fire by some miscreant. The engineer was seriously hurt.

WASHINGTON.

Conkling Gathering His Forces for a Fight in the Senate.

He Distrusts "That Man James"—Military—Capital Gossip.

Military Order.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The following is the text of the general order promulgated to-day relative to the military divisions: By direction of the President paragraphs four and five, general order number eighty-four, December 18, 1880, from this office constituting the Department of Arkansas and Military Division of the Gulf, are rescinded and the boundary lines of the military divisions of Missouri and of the Atlantic are restored to those in force prior to the issue of said order, to-wit.: The Military Division of Missouri to embrace the departments of Texas and of Missouri as they existed before the publication of General Order's number 84 of 1880, and the departments of Platte and Dakota. The Military Division of the Atlantic is to embrace the Departments of the East and South, as it was constituted prior to the issuance of General Orders 84 of 1880. The records of the Division of the Gulf will be sent to the Adjutant General of the Army. Those of the Department of Arkansas relating to troops in the Department of the Missouri to the headquarters of that department, and those relating to troops in Louisiana and Arkansas to the headquarters of the Department of the South. Maj. Gen. J. M. Schofield is placed on waiting orders with full pay until further order of the President.

The Robertson Nomination.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Another Republican caucus will be held Monday to take up the new phase of the Robertson question, and the Administration Senators will contend for a repeal of the last caucus, allowing one objection by a Senator to send a nomination over. Conkling expects to be beaten on this. He expects that the rule will be repealed, and is trying to muster all the strength possible for the fight in the Senate. Conkling complains of Dawes and other Republicans who he says made voluntarily professions of friendship for him, but deserted him when the President made his attack Hawley and Hale will lead the Administration side in the caucus. It appears, too, that Conkling has lost confidence in James, as in the executive session yesterday he alluded to him as "that man James." Monday's caucus will decide the whole matter, and the prevailing opinion is that it will agree to take up and confirm Robertson at once.

STRAW BIDS.

Corrupt Contractors Prosecuted for Defrauding the Government.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—At noon to-day Joseph R. Block, business partner of Albert C. Harmer, member of Congress from the Fifth Pennsylvania District, Joseph Funk, J. Blockmon and W. R. Casor, who were taken into custody yesterday for complicity in the scheme to defraud the United States Government in putting in straw bids to secure contracts for carrying mails, were arraigned for a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Smith in the U. S. Court room. The Government was represented by U. S. District Attorney Valentine, while each of the accused was represented by eminent members of the Philadelphia Bar. A large number of witnesses were examined. It was shown that the bonds had been executed in Block's office in this city. Block made a statement in which he acknowledged that he was a contractor, and that other people, who had been taken into custody, had bid for him in order that proper security might be entered, and he further stated he was able and perfectly willing to indemnify the Government for any loss they might have sustained. The testimony previous to this statement being made was of such a conflicting character as to the complicity of Block that the commissioner was unable to give a decision in the matter. Finally, after two hours' hearing all the accused were held in $5,000 each for further hearing on Monday.

BEATEN TO A JELLY.

Horrible Murder by a Colored Desperado in Arkansas.

CINCINNATI, May 7.—A Little Rock, Ark., special of May 7 to the Times-Star says that the news has just come in of a horrible murder at Connors' Bend, Lee county, Ark. A quarrel occurred, followed by a fight, in which John Richards, a white man, knocked down Isaac Green, a colored desparado, with his fist. Isaac sprang to his feet with cat-like quickness, seized a heavy maul, downed Richards by a quick, deadly blow on the head, then continued the mauling until Richard's head was a flattened, jellied mass. Green has been arrested and is in great danger of being lynched.

Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Loans, increase, $6,414,800; specie, increase, $1,057,100; legal tenders, increase, $2,399,900; deposits, increase, $10,497,600; circulation, increase, $64,100; reserve, increase, $1,672,600. The banks now hold $13,112,625 in excess of legal requirements.

Assignment.

CINCINNATI, May 7.—G. T. Simmons, carriage manufacturer, made an assignment to-day for the benefit of his creditors. The liabilities are estimated at $43,000.

Arctic Exploration.

AMSTERDAM, May 7.—The schooner Wm. Barents will sail to-day on her fourth voyage of Arctic exploration. She expects to return before winter.

Small Pox.

ADAMS, MASS., May 7.—The small pox has spread here to such an extent that the Board Health is alarmed, and a pest house is being built.

ALL RIGHT AGAIN!

The Missouri Pacific Railway

Is running its passenger trains through from St. Louis to Leavenworth, Atchison and St. Joseph without delay or change, and has resumed the sale of tickets to those points at its offices, 115 North Fourth street and Union Depot.

How the Solid Men and the Unsolid Attire Themselves.

A Pleasant Bit of Foolishness, Wherein Male Dress, as Seen in an Afternoon Walk, is Described.

It cannot be laid to the charge of most men that they are fond of dress, or that they devote much time to what shall adorn their backs, and yet few are entirely indifferent to appearance, and the oddities, the poets, the philosophers and the unnumerous ascetic who effect utter recklessness of raiment, are not in general esteem. It is a certainty that a man's raiment is not an index of his ability or indeed always of his wealth, but it is equally certain that the popular opinion of the shabby man of talent is that he is devoid of sense regarding his own respectability. His wealth of intellect in divers particulars is damaged, and not increased, by his disregard of that decency of appearance which is almost inseparable from refinement. Most men of fair income in this country dress up to a certain standard of respectability, and then give the subject no further thought. It is only by presenting as fair an appearance as the majority of his class that a man can avoid attracting attention. A plasterer, a painter or a hod-carrier should dress according to his business, but the lawyer or doctor who should wear the laborer's raiment would be esteemed as slightly "cracked."

Very few men can remember what another wears, and they are certain to take little notice of the particulars. It has been well said, that a man is well dressed when he creates that impression without the beholder being able to remember what he wore. The "loud" dresser, however, always has on one or more articles which immediately attract attention. A reporter of the POST-DISPATCH took a stroll one day recently around the business streets and marts and made notes as to how men of reputation and no reputation attire themselves. The "biled" shirt seems to be universal in St. Louis, but it isn't always "biled" often enough even with all of the following parties:

Postmaster Hays wears a plain, dark business suit.

John Dryden declares that he is unalterably opposed to loud cravats.

George Bain says: "Hang clothes; 'tis the rosette that makes the man."

M. L. Gray wears a diagonal suit and a silk hat of the Queen Anne style.

Henry Overstolz prefers a silk hat and broadcloth suit, without jewelry.

George D. Capen never wears store clothes, or any article that has a wrinkle in it.

Comptroller Adreon is generally seen in light blue coat, soft hat and black cravat.

Judge Hamilton wears plain black clothes and a countenance chock full of sunbeams.

Web Samuel wears a suit of grey in two shades. He cares less for clothes than politics.

Dr. I. N. Love prefers not to be itemized until he gets possession of his new spring suit.

S. M. Glover don't care for clothes and puts on each morning whatever comes first to hand.

Morse Hunter is always attired to the extreme notch of nicety. His hats are like mirrors.

Capt. R. B. Wade looks best in a Spanish cavalier hat. His clothes are always of the latest cut.

C. B. Greeley is very dressy and never wears anything that has been over two days in fashion.

Joseph Griswold, of the Lindell, dresses stylishly and has a penchant for neckwear of flaming hue.

E. R. Casselburg, the retired lawyer, wears broadcloth and keeps his hand generally upon his coat-tails.

William Patrick is always well but neatly dressed. He wears a black Prince Albert coat as a rule.

Joseph Franklin is plainer dressed than many of his clerks. He wears dark goods or pepper and salt.

David R. Francis dresses neatly in a light-weight business suit. He is said to be addicted to fancy socks.

The Rev. John Snyder never disports in clerical garb. A business suit is good enough for him to attend a matinee in.

P. D. Cordell, the temperance man, wears blue clothes and a silk hat that has never encountered anything but water.

Mr. Ralph Sellew wears a business coat and always carries one hand on the back of it. His hat and heart are soft.

Judge Speck is given to gray suits and light overcoats. He always wears a stovepipe hat, which is frequently of light color.

Horace H. Morgan sports the handsomest male foot in town. In his bachelor days he was a wholesale buyer of neckties.

John Finn dresses in broadcloth and has lately discarded a somewhat antique silk hat for one of the newest, slickest sort.

A. W. Soper wears handsome clothes since he became general manager. His hat is always silky and right out of the mill.

Jas. A. Aglar wears his years remarkably well. He is over sixty, but don't look forty. Besides his years he wears blue flannel clothes.

Judge Gottschalk wears a short gray beard and glasses above a dark business suit. He has little use for swell clothing of the plaid variety.

Britton A. Hill is chiefly noted for wearing a very smiling countenance. His pants and shoes sometimes fail to connect, but otherwise he is correct.

Carlos S. Greeley, like many wealthy men of the old school, wears plain pepper-and-salt clothes, a wide stiff hat and boots that don't cramp his feet.

Citizen Fink wears a navy blue flannel and a Mackinaw straw hat. This is admitted to be the proper attire for the responsible position of citizen at large.

Benjamin Stickney, Jr., is just now sporting a nobby green checked suit surmounted by a little round black hat of two inches altitude. He always dresses well.

Colonel Don Morrison thinks very little of man's dress. He prefers a business suit and a large stiff hat, worn well back on the ears. He always wears a cane.

Given Campbell wears invariably a slight suit and unlighted cigar. The latter is worn for days either in the hand or the mouth, but never touched with match.

General Marmaduke dresses quite plainly and always wears a soft hat. He acquired his predilection for the wide-brimmed, soft hat in his youthful and military days.

Col. Normile wears a blonde moustache and goatee, which he does not remove at night. The rest of his attire consists of a gray check suit and round black hat.

Judge Lindley probably couldn't tell himself what he wears, but it is usually a judicial black broadcloth, not too new but just new enough, and surmounted by spectacles.

Don Thatcher is a nobby dresser. He never wears a coat that he can sit down upon, and it is alway English material. His small stiff hat has to be replaced every six weeks, so a friend says.

Col. Norman J. Colman has lately surprised his Granger constituents by discarding the use of hay seed in his toilet, and is out daily now in a handsome spring suit and brown straw hat.

Col. Charles L. Hunt always wears a plain black or pepper and salt business suit, which gives no indication of the length of its owner's rent roll. He hasn't been seen in a plug hat since his courting days.

William Pyde has not sampled lemonade or anything else for at least twenty years in any other rig than blue broadcloth worn under a large soft blue hat. If he was to wear anything but blue his family wouldn't recognize him.

Capt. Wm. Bull is always tastefully attired, generally in a blue coat and grey pantaloons. He wears a hat that fits his skull close, according to present fashion. It is hinted, but not proved, that he wears a bald spot under the hat.

Joseph B. McCullagh, of the Globe-Democrat, wears a bobtail business coat and pants to match. When he goes to the opera he trots out a swallowed tail coat with trimmings to match, and makes a mash of his whole reportorial force.

Jo. Cann, the smoothing iron expert, wears a blue shirt outside of trousers that only reach down to the second story of his ancles. It is the fashionable dress, however, of Fooblow, China, where Jo. first felt the weight of his mother's dainty slipper.

Craig Alexander perfectly despises good clothes, although well able to disport in purple and fine linen. His coat seems always to be climbing up his back to get away from his pantaloons, and the pantaloons try equally hard to leave the gaiters in the distance. Alexander is a genius in everything except clothes.

Murdering Foundlings.

From the New York Tribune.

A dismal picture of horrors the Philadelphia Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has drawn of the Philadelphia Almshouse and of the foundlings living, or rather dying there. Anything more dreadful, according to the report, than the locality of the institution cannot be imagined. It is upon the banks of a sluggish stream, turbid and offensive with the outflow of numerous sewers and factories, the surrounding atmosphere thick with malaria. The building is badly drained and ventilated. The walls are saturated "with pertiferous effluvia." The nurses are ignorant and clumsy paupers. The diet is bad. The milk is thickened with rice-flour, a very deleterious article of food for children. There is talk of taking the infants out of this house, by habeas corpus, and of an injunction to restrain the managers from receiving any more. But of all, "a supervisory board of intelligent ladies" is recommended. This touches the point exactly. If such a board is organized, thorough reform may be expected, and a watchfulness made keen by a love and pity which man can seldom boast of.

A Boon for Gentlemen.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

An agency in Paris furnishes men to make calls at a fixed rate per hour. If this conventional sort of sham visiting is insisted on, no American city, say of 30,000 inhabitants and over, should be without so admirable an arrangement. It is true that few earnest men make calls before they are married because of "business," and after they are married it is well-known that the wife makes all the calls in every well-regulated family. None the less the unmade call is a terrible burden on the masculine conscience. There is first the vague feeling that he ought to have made the call, the series of doubtful excuses for not having made the call, and lastly, poignant remorse that it is now too late to make any call. Under these successive shocks, a social conscience, seared as with a hot iron, is at last developed, and a man gratefully accepts all manner of hospitality, from a dinner down, with never a call to acknowledge the debt. An agency will cure all this after a fashion, and an agent—"calls executed with neatness and dispatch"—would probably learn how to leave, when to leave, and above all, not to sit and say nothing, silent as a sentry box.

A Singular Strike.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The strike fever that is prevalent everywhere seems to be contagious. The boys of "B" Grade, Sixth Reader, Twenty-fourth District School, at Pendleton, seem to have caught the feve;, for they made a singular strike yesterday afternoon. The boys wanted their teacher, Mr. J. R. Brown, to dismiss them at oecess, which he very properly refused to do. At recess the boys held a meeting and determined to strike for a new teacher. They agreed among themselves not to go to school until their request was granted. The strikers were distinguished from the other scholars by a red ribbon pinned to the lapels of their coats. Public opinion seems to be against the strikers. A large number of the boys' parents struck hard last night, but they did it in quite a different manner. Some of the tsrikers will, no doubt, find sitting ratther uncomfortable this morning. Mr. Brown is one of the very best teachers in this school, and is not to blame for this singular freak of a few incorrigible boys.

IN A TRANCE.

Interesting Experiments in Mesmerism—Syggignoscism Extraordinary.

From the New York Sun, 5th.

In a discussion of Dr. William A. Hammond's paper on "Syggignoscism," also called hypnotism, which was read before the Medico-Legal Society a month ago, Dr. George M. Beard gave some illustrative experiments with four subjects at a meeting of the society last evening. On the wall of the lecture room were three charts, which Dr. Beard referred to in explaining the theory of trance, the varieties of trance, and the six sources of error in experimenting with living human beings, such as intentional or unintentional deception, intentional or unintentional assistance of third parties, and chance or coincidence. He designated fourteen varieties of trance, among which were intellectual, or absent-mindedness, somnambulistic, cataloptic, alchoholic, epileptic, and induced or mesmeric.

Lawyer Riddle, First Vice-President, in introducing Dr. Beard, struggled twice with syggignoscism before he could pronounce it, and Dr. Beard confined himself to the plainer and simpler word, trance. The Doctor said that his first theory of trance was the concentration theory. He had read a paper on it in 1876. He illustrated it by saying that the mind, when in a normal condition, is like a brilliantly lighted room; when in the condition of sleep, like a partly lighted room, and when in the condition of trance, like a room in which only one light is burning dimly. With a wooden rod he touched one of his subjects, a lad of about 18 years of age, with a sleepy appearance, who sat in front of him, and the subject started up and followed the point of the rod wherever it was moved. By snapping his fingers sharply and slapping the subject's face, Dr. Beard caused the lad to come out of the state of trance. The lad was bewildered for a few seconds at finding himself standing in full view of the audience.

"I don't do that," Dr. Beard said. "It is done for him because he expected it to be done. An earthquake would have done it, or a fire near him, or any sudden excitement, and he could not help it, unless he tried to resist it."

His next experiment was to cause three young men to fall asleep by dropping a small ball of iron on the floor. They slept soundly for several minutes, and a physician, who was called to assist, tried in vain to arouse them. Dr. E. C. Spitzka, who had been moving nervously in his seat, rose at this point and tried to interrupt Dr. Beard by suggesting a point of order. He was so persistent that at length the presiding officer recognized him, and he said: "My point of order is that this is not a discussion of the medico-legal relations of a trance. It is a new thing in the form of a new paper by Dr. Beard."

"I must rule that your point of order is overruled," Lawyer Riddle said. "Go on, Dr. Beard."

Dr. Spitzka and a friend picked up their hats and went out muttering to each other.

Dr. Beard continued, saying that the subjects were simply acting out a dream, the suggestion of which came merely from outside. In order to show that they could be put in a state of trance with difficulty, he caused three of the subjects to think of their relatives and the other to think of a table, and then tried to influence them. In only one case was he successful, after trying several seconds. He said that only a very few persons will be good subjects. Perhaps only one person in a hundred could be found. The subjects that he experimented with, he said, have been trained in the same way that dogs, horses and birds are trained to perform. When he first tried his experiments with them he could not do anything. He asserted that the subjects were not humbugging the audience, and he explained how he had proved it. Nevertheless he acknowledged that what had been done could be pretended by a good actor.

After explaining how he had proved that a lady, blindfolded, had read cards when in a trance, he described how another lady had written a poem on "Nervous Exhaustion" at the rate of 100 words a minute when in a trance, which, he said, was a feat that few poets could perform when in a norma condition.

In regard to the medico-legal aspect, he said: "If I should tell anyone of these subjects to murder anyone here, he would do it, provided he could get at him. I can kill the subjects and they cannot prevent me, and I can cause any one of them to kill himself." By making a few passes of the hand before the face of one of the lads the doctor put him in a trance, and, after telling him that he had lost all his money, asked him if he desired to kill himself. "Yes," and the doctor put into his hand a broken, unloaded pistol, saying, "It might as well be a barrel of potatoes." The lad cocked the weapon, and when the Doctor said "Now, place it to your heart," he pulled open his coat, and placing the muzzle against his breast pulled the trigger. Instantly he fell back, apparently shot dead. A few seconds of confusion followed, and then Dr. Beard aroused the lad by pulling him up and shaking him briskly. Staggering to his seat, the lad looked silly and arranged his necktie.

The next experiment was to cause two of the subjects to quarrel and then shoot at each other, one using the broken pistol and the other a handkerchief as a firearm. Both fell, apparently dead, among the chairs. One of the lads was told to steal some money on the reading desk and run away with it. The lad grabbed a bunch of yarn, thrust it into an inside pocket of his coat and ran out of the room before anybody heeded Dr. Beard's call of "Somebody catch him!" While the Doctor was saying that, the lad was acting out a terrible dream, and that he saw no one, and that if forty policeman had been at his side it would have made no difference, the lad was brought back by two gentlemen who had chased him two blocks before catching him, and even then he had not been aroused.

After Dr. Beard had concluded, Dr. Birdsall claimed that any well-trained person could do what had been done by the subjects, and he asserted that Dr. Beard could not prove that the phenomena are not feigned.

Dr. Gurdner asserted that nothing had been done that he could not do with a little nerve.

Dr. Abbott asked whether persons in a trance would reveal what they had done when in a normal condition, and referred to the case of little Annie Crawford, who was punished so severely by her father because it was thought that she had stolen valuables. He desired to know whether the servant girl, who was the guilty person, would reveal anything in a trance. Dr. Beard replied that persons when in a trance remember what they did in a trance before, that they have no memorable consciousness, and that they will not be likely to reveal what they did before being in a trance.

The Channel Tunnel.

From the London News.

The preliminary operations in connection with the boring of the proposed channel tunnel still continue to elicit considerable public interest; and it is not a little satisfactory to those who take an interest in the progress of the work, and much more so to scientific men, to know that up to the present time the operations have been attended with the most gratifying results. No serious impediment has as yet presented itself, and although that part of the work which is likely to be fraught with the greatest amount of risk and difficulty has yet to be encountered, there appears to be no reason why the fondest hopes of the speculators, despite predictions to the contrary, may not even now be realized, and the traveling portion of the public reap the benefit of a scheme which, to say the least of it, will effectually remove the unpleasant sensations and the inconveniences which is so often experienced in a passage across "the silvery streak." The boring advances at the rate of about twenty-five feet per day of ten hours, and has already been carried to a distance of above 300 yards. This is in the shape of a driftway of about seven feet in diameter, opening near the mouth of the tunnel on the west side of Abott's cliff near where the recent fall of chalk on the South Eastern Railway occurred. Commencing here, it runs in a line parallel with the line of railway and follows the natural dip of the strata. The idea is to continue in this way until a depth of some 200 feet below the bed of the channel is reached. It is then confidently hoped by geologists that the character of the geological formations will admit of the engineering operations being advanced in a direct line or level, so as to allow of a corresponding rise on the other side of the channel. The operations are carried on under the directions of Col. Beaumont, the chalk being cut by a disc furnished with cutters, which is worked by one of that gentleman's compressed air engines. It is a most ingenious mechanical contrivance, and for more reasons than one is peculiarly adapted to the work which it is performing here. The disc makes two revolutions per minute, slicing off the chalk to the thickness of a quarter of an inch at each revolution. There is no change in the soil, which is still gray chalk, and there is a remarkable freedom from the percolation of water.

Dressing for a Photograph.

From the New York Sun.

"The question is often asked," said an experienced photographer, "why actors and actresses take the most pleasing pictures. It is because they study the principles of art and good taste in their profession and understand how to dress. Moreover, they usually bring a selection of veils, flowers, curls, braids, laces, and sometimes costumes to give the photographer a choice of accessories. They come when they are wholly at leisure and are not flustered. A red face takes black, and they know it. Then they do not load themselves down with gewgaws and haberdasheries, to show all that they have got in worldly goods. Few persons know how to dress for a picture like an actress. The best materials for ladies to wear when about to sit for a photograph are such as will fold or drape nicely, like reps, winceys, poplins, satins and silks. Lavender, lilac, sky blue, purple and French blue take very light and are worse for a picture than pure white. Corn color and salmon are better. China pink, rose pink, magenta, crimson, pea green, Mazarine blue, navy blue, fawn color, Quaker color, dove color, ashes of roses and stone color, show a pretty, light gray in the photograph. Scarlet, claret, sea-green, light orange, leather color, light Bismarck, and slate color are excellent colors to photograph. Cherry, wine color, light apple green, Metternich green, dark apple green, bottle green, dark orange, golden and red brown show nearly the same agreeable color in the picture. A black silk always looks well and it takes well if not bedecked with ribbons and laces that will take white. Dark Bismarck snuff brown usually take blacker than a black silk or satin and are not easy to drape. A silk, because it has more gloss and reflects more light, usually takes lighter than a woolen dress. Ladies with dark or brown hair should avoid contrasts in their costumes, as light substances photograph more quickly than dark, and ladies with light hair should dress in something lighter than those whose hair is dark or brown. Few ladies understand how to arrange their hair so as to harmonize with the form of the head, but blindly follow the fashion, be the neck long or short or the face narrow or broad. A broad face appears more so if the hair is arranged low over the forehead or is parted at the side, and a long neck becomes stork-like when the hair is built up high, while a few curls would make a most agreeable change in the effect. Powdered hair gives good effect, and powder should be bestowed upon freckles."

A Ghastly Relic of Crime.

Lewiston. (Me.) Special to Chicago Times.

Ten or eleven years ago the trial of James Lowell for the murder of his wife Lizzie was the greatest sensation Lewiston ever experienced. In the historical murder trial of Eugene Aram in England in 1852, the head of the victim was found and identified by peculiarities in the teeth, and it was this discovery and identification which brought about a conviction. In the Lowell case the weakest point of the prosecution was the failure to find more than a headless skeleton. This was identified as that of the missing Mrs. Lowell from the peculiarities in the dress in which it was found, and which corresponded with one worn by the missing woman. If the head of the skeleton had been found it would have been positive proof whether or not the bones were those of Mrs. Lowell. Nevertheless the husband was convicted and given a life sentence in State Prison, where he now is. He has claimed since his trial that his wife has been seen alive in the West, but it was pretty conclusively proven that riding up the Switzerland road they got into a quarrel, and he threw her out of the wagon over the seat and broke her neck, after which he cut off her head and concealed it. The missing head, now a grinning skull, was, on yesterday afternoon found by a workman named Day, who was engaged in cleaning up a farm bordering on the Switzerland road. Brushing away the debris which surrounded it he found that the skull was perfectly preserved. The lower jaw was detached, naturally enough, it being the only moveable bone of the skull. He also found imbedded in the leaves with the skull the top vertebra of the spinal column called the "atlas," which supports the head. Great interest has been created by the discovery, and there is no doubt that the skull is that of the murdered woman.

Successful Skin Grafting.

Newburg (N. J.) Special to Cin. Gazette.

Dr. John Deyo, of this city, has a case of skin grafting. The patient is a little girl ten years old, living in Mill street, who was terribly scalded six weeks ago. She and an older sister were taking a boiler of hot water off the stove, when it fell, the girl being thrown forward so that her arms were immersed in the water. The whole of the right arm was stripped of the skin from the shoulders to the tips of the fingers, so that the muscles were left bare, and the left arm badly injured below the elbow. The unfortunate child has suffered terribly. The slightest movement of the right arm caused blood to flow from a myriad of places, but careful nursing has much improved its condition. The approach of hot weather caused the doctor to fear that her sufferings might be aggravated and the child exhausted, so he resolved to hasten the healing of the arm by the process of skin grafting. New skin has already formed over the hand and about the shoulders, and there was a strip extending upward near the wrist, but still nine-tenths of the arm was bare.

The doctor persuaded two medical students and five or six other young men to volunteer their aid, and the party went to the child's house on Sunday. The little girl's arm had been brought into the best possible condition for the operation. The young men bared their arms, the doctor cutting from eight to fifteen or twenty small bits of skin from each of the young men and transferring them to the arm of the girl, where he placed them at different points on the bare, quivering flesh, in the hope that a good proportion of them, at least, would adhere and grow. Probably fifty or sixty grafts were made, and these will be followed by a new batch in a few days. So far the grafting has been done under favorable circumstances, and while it is yet too soon to predict a result, there is much hope that the operation will prove a success.

A Wonderful Lake in Iowa.

From the Burlington Hawkeye.

The greatest wonder in the State of Iowa, and perhaps in any other State, is what is called the Walled Lake, in Wright county, 12 miles north of the Dubuque and Pacific Railway, and 150 miles west of Dubuque City. The lake is two or three feet higher than the earth's surface. In some places the wall is 10 feet high, 15 feet wide at the bottom and 5 feet wide on top. Another fact is the size of the stone used in its construction, the whole of them varying in weight from three tons down to 100 pounds. There is an abundance of stones in Wright county, but surrounding the lake to the extent of 5 or 10 miles there are none. No one can form an idea of the means employed to bring them to the spot or who constructed it. Around the entire lake is a belt of woodland half a mile in length, composed of oak. With this exception the country is a rolling prairie. The trees must have been planted there at the time of the building of the wall. In the spring of the year 1856 there was a great storm, and the ice on the lake broke the wall in several places, and the farmers in the vicinity were obliged to repair the damages to prevent inundation. The lake occupies a ground surface of 2,800 acres; depth of water as great as 25 feet. The water is clear and cold, soil sandy and loamy. It is singular that no one has been able to ascertain where the water comes from nor where it goes, yet it is always clear and fresh.

PROCTOR IN PERIHELION.

The English Astronomer Says the World is Not to be Disturbed.

From the Chicago Times, 6th.

Prof. Richard Proctor, the great London astronomer, is at the Grand Pacific Hotel with his bride. They were married on last Tuesday, at St. Joseph, Mo., the lady being Mrs. Sallie D. Crawford, daughter of Mr. Charles M. Thompson of that city, and a niece of the late rebel general, M. Jeff Thompson. Fiction got up a very sprightly little romance—and crept into a St. Joseph paper with it—about this marriage. Fiction had it that Prof. Proctor went to Australia last summer with an invalid wife; and that Mrs. Crawford went there with an invalid husband. Both invalids died, according to the story, and the widower and the widow, coming home across the broad Pacific, were drawn together by sympathy and fell in love. The Times sent a reporter to the Grand Pacific on yesterday afternoon to learn the facts.

Prof. Proctor came down to the office in response to a card. He has been in Chicago and a great many people have seen him, but, for the benefit of a great many more who have not, it may be stated that he is short and broad-shouldered and wears black clothes. He looks like a worker, a man of business, an architect, or something of that sort. He cuts his whiskers—which are gray—quite short and after the "mutton-chop" order, and his eyes, which are brown, are as searching as one of his telescopes, but have a humorous twinkle quite human and not so "purely scientific" as to indicate that all that is ordinarily mortal is theorized out of his soul. He has the unmistakable English accent, and is a very interesting gentleman to talk with.

"How much truth is there, Professor," asked the reporter, "in all the worry that the human family is having just now about perihelion and floods, and the stars in general?"

"Not a bit—not a bit," laughed the professor.

"Well, how about the comet somebody by the name of Swift discovered the other day."

"Swift—is it so? Has he discovered another comet? Well, I didn't know it, I'm sure. I'm the worst person in the world to come to to learn about such things now—I'm so busy traveling and lecturing you know. But it's a telescope comet, I suppose—a little fellow; don't amount to much, probably. But let's take a seat, and I'll tell you about some of these things."

And, seating himself, the Professor fixed his eye on the office flagging and, turning over the card meditatively between his fingers, kept gazing at this and that spot on the the stone floor as if he had a constellation in the range of vision.

"It used to be thought," said he, "that the stars had an influence on the weather, on floods, pestilences, and all that sort of thing, but science has disproved it. The truth is that the influence of all the planets together is not equal to the difference between the greatest and the least influence which the moon exerts in a year. And if all the giant planets—those outside the earth's orbit—were to come into conjunction and perihelion, all at the same time, they would not exert as much influence as that very small ratio of the moon's influence, namely, the mere difference between its greatest and least influence."

"Then the world is not going to pieces this year?"

"Not at all. Why, some of the planets are coming into conjunction every now and then all the time. Two of them came into conjunction on the 19th of last June. Let's see—nothing happened that day, did there?"

"And there will be no more trouble this year because so many come together?" queried the reporter.

"There is no more reason to expect it than that Jupiter has an effect on the sun spots."

The reporter said that somebody had stated that the developments of astronomy were more and more demonstrating that theae was after all some ground for ancient astrology. Did the Professor think so?

"On the contrary, if anybody reads the works of ancient astrology," said he, "they will see what a mistake that is. The astrologists claimed, not that the relations of the planets to each other had an effect on the destinies of men, but that the position of the planets in the sky—that is, in the canopy above the horizon—had such effects. For instance, the ancients thought the stars in the ascendant—which means those coming up from the horizon—were those that would influence the career of a child born during their ascendancy; but that had nothing to do with perihelion and conjunctions."

"Well, what about Jupiter's influence on sun spots, which you spoke of a moment ago?"

"Why, it has been said that scientists admit that Jupiter affects the sun's spots, but the truth is, scientists have only thought such a thing possible, because Jupiter's period is ten years and ten months, or about that—of course, one can't carry all these things in one's head—and the sun-spots' period is ten years and one month. But nine months make a great deal of difference."

"What do you think of the idea that the sun-spots affect the weather?"

"I think they do not do so at all. I have watched the sun-spots through cold and warm winters and through hot and cool summers, and I could not see that they had any effect whatever upon one another."

"They say you are on your bridal tour, Professor?"

"That is the scientific fact," laughed the distinguished star-gazer.

"And I see by the Western papers that there is a romance connected with it?"

"Well, that is not true; not a word of it, and I would just as leave that some newspaper like the Times would state within the next fifteen hundred years that it is not true. Let me see"—figuring up one of the imaginary constellations on the hotel floor—"I was in Australia last August, it's true, but—just to show that the story is false—it is stated that my wife was there, too. My wife, in fact, had died two years before that. It was not until October, 1879, that I came out."

A Romance in Court.

Patterson (N. J.) Special Dispatch.

A romantic case came up before Judge Dixon in the Supreme Court, Chambers, this morning. Some time ago John P. Clifford, of Yonkers, N. Y., became engaged to Miss Ellen McKilvey, of this city. Miss McKilvey afterwards began to lose her sight, and about six months ago she became totally blind. On Monday they were married by the Rev. Father Hens, in the Church of St. Boniface. Mrs. Clifford's parents announced to the bridegroom that they did not intend to let their daughter leave their house, as they loved her too well to part with her. Mr. Clifford had fitted up a home for her in Yonkers, and had made everything comfortable for her reception. He argued with the old people, but they would not listen to him. Then he applied to Counsellor D. B. English, who got out a writ of habeas corpus against the bride's parents, requiring them to produce Mrs. Clifford in court, before Judge Dixon, this morning. The parents told the Judge that their only claim to keep their daughter was founded on their great love for her, which had only been increased by her misfortune. Judge Dixon's said that a husband's claim is regarded first in law, and as Mrs. Clifford said that, while she loved her father and mother dearly, her duty and her fondest love called her to go with her husband, he ordered the custody of the young woman to the bridegroom. The old people thereupon kissed their daughter and son-in-law, and all went away apparently contented. Oculists say that Mrs. Clifford's sight will probably be restored.

The Gloom of Russia.

From the New York Mail.

The French writer, De Custine, whose lively book on Russia has been read more widely than any other work on that country, long ago predicted the social revolution that seems imminent in that strange country. At the close of his notable volume he thus sums up his impressions of Russia, and more recent writers have only confirmed his verdict:

The country that I have just surveyed is as sombre and monotonous as that which I described formerly is brilliant and varied. To draw its exact picture is to renounce the hope to please. In Russia life is as gloomy as in Andalusia it is gay; the Russians are as dull as the Spaniards are full of spirits. In Spain the absence of political liberty is compensated by a personal independence, which, perhaps, exists nowhere else to the same extent, and the effects of which are surprising; whilst in Russia the one is as little known as the other. A Spaniard lives on love, a Russian lives on calculation; a Spaniard relates everything, and if he has nothing to relate he invents; a Russian conceals everything, or if he has nothing to conceal he is still silent, that he may appear discreet; Spain is infested with brigands, but they rob only on the road; the Russian roads are safe, but you will be plundered infallibly in the houses; Spain is full of the ruins and the memories of every century. Russia looks back only upon yesterday—her history is rich in nothing but promises; Spain is studded with mountains, whose forms vary at every step taken by the traveler; Russia is but a single unchanging scene, extending from one end of a vast plain to the other; the sun illumines Seville and vivifies the whole peninsula; the mists veil the distances in Petersburg, which remain dim during even the finest summer evenings. In short, the two countries are the very opposite of each other; they differ as regards day and night, fire and ice, north and south.

If ever your sons should be discontented with France try my receipt; tell them to go to Russia. It is a country useful to every foreigner; whoever has well examined that country will be content to live anywhere else. It is always well to know that a society exists where no happiness is possible, because, by a law of his nature, man cannot be happy unless he is free.

THE LOST JEANNETTE.

How the Search for Her Will be Carried On by the "Corwin."

From the New York Herald.

The admirable dispatch with which the Treasury Department has sent off the Corwin on her cruise through Behring Strait will enable Captain Hooper to avail himself of any opportunity that offers to communicate with the Jeannette. The Corwin takes time by the forelock and will probably be the first vessel to enter the Arctic this season. Her instructions not only authorize, but direct, her commander to "make careful inquiries regarding the progress and whereabouts of the steamer Jeannette," and "if practicable communicate with and extend any needed assistance to that vessel." Considering the vantage Captain Hooper's early arrival in the Arctic will give him for executing this part of his orders, as well as the latitude of action they leave to his discretion, his chances for finding some clew to the Jeannette's whereabouts seem almost as good as those of the commander of the search steamer Rodgers "The movement of the ice in Behring Strait is often so sudden," said Sherard Osborn, "that a report twenty-four hours old is of no value." But this very variability suggests the probable occurence of openings in the pack, just such an opening as greeted the Investigator in July, 1850, when on her way to Point Barrow. Once within the Artic Circle and able to examine the coast from Kotzebue Sound to Point Barrow, the Corwin will be in a good position to pick up some tidings of the Jeannette, if indeed any disaster has overtaken the exploring steamer. A study of the winter winds and ice drift in the Arctic north of Behring Strait will strengthen the conviction that if the Jeannette has been disabled and driven from the vicinity of Wrangell Land it is well nigh certain that the ship, or some relic of the ship, would have been lodged on the coast of Arctic America, since Point Barrow projects into the latitude of Wrangell Land, and the intervening sea is swept in winter by northwesterly winds. For this reason it is probable that the observation of "polar ice, densely packed, from Wainwright Inlet upon the American coast, to latitude 71½ degrees north and longitude 164 degrees west," made by Commander Moore, of the Plover, in 1850, holds good almost every spring. The Corwin may, therefore, reasonably hope to fall in with some trace of the Jeannette in the event that the latter has succumbed to the violence of Arctic elements, and has been borne helplessly along as was the Tegethoff in 1873, in the great drift currents of the Polar Ocean. Should the Corwin, therefore, after a thorough search of the American coast, gain no clew to the Jeannette's whereabouts this fact will be a strong reason for concluding that she has not been disabled or drifted from the vicinity of Wrangell Land, and the Rodgers, under Lieutenant Berry, will pursue the search in that direction with greatly increased confidence that she is on the right trail. Should the Corwin, however, find some evidence that the missing explorers under Capt. De Long have been driven in the direction of Point Barrow, Capt. Hooper will probably have time to communicate the fact to the commander of the Rodgers before he leaves Behring Strait for the North.

The Isthmus Canal.

From the New York Tribune.

Is De Lesseps deceiving the French public about the Isthmus Canal? All reports from Panama agree that no digging has begun yet, although the season for outdoor work is fast drawing to a close. Considerable surveying is being done, and a small force of men is at work cutting brush, and that is all. There are by no means the energetic operations which the great engineer promised the subscribers to his canal stock. His project does not lag for want of funds, for he has money enough secured already to pay for all the work that could be done in two or three years, and on this money he is pledged to pay five per cent interest, so that there is a strong financial reason for pushing the enterprise forward as rapidly as possible, if it is really a genuine one. De Lesseps himself is in Egypt, looking after his affairs there. His representative at Panama, Lieut. Wyse, is about to start for Paris. The rainy season will soon put a stop to the field work, and as nothing has been accomplished in this direction worth mentioning, a year has been as good as lost. As to the American end of the project, if there ever was any besides ex-Secretary Thompson, it gives no sign of vitality.

Buying New Carpets.

From the Washington Star.

The visit made by Mrs. Garfield to New York was the second one she had ever made to that city. While there she looked at furniture and carpets for the White House, but gave no orders, as the appropriation will not become available before July 1. All will be pleased to learn that it has been decided to restore to the parlors the distinctive colors by which they have always been known, and with which their furnishing has only partially corresponded since the last time they were fitted up, eight years ago. The red parlor, for instance, has for a long time been called so by courtesy only, having less of that color than of any other in it. It has been decided to replace the expensive carpets woven in a single piece, especially for each room, with carpets sold by the yard, which are less costly. It is thought useless extravagance to put the most expensive carpets in rooms so constantly used as are those at the White House, and by a class of people who do not take care to brush mud or dust from their feet before entering.

Chivalric Brigands.

From the New York Tribune.

The brigands who seized Mr. and Mrs. Sutter and their little girl at their house in Salonica and carried them to the mountains showed extraordinary coolness and address. Like the brigands of romance, they also behaved themselves with chivalrous courtesy when once they had conceived a respect for the courage of their captives. They insisted that Mrs. Suter should put on a pair of stout shoes in view of the arduous tramp before her; and on the way up the mountain they rolled cigarettes for Mr. Suter, and actually sent back some of their number to look for a doll which the little girl had chanced to drop. The clear-headed rascals were much pleased to learn that the guard stationed at Mr. Suter's house was placed there by authority of the Turkish Government, evidently thinking that the Sultar, under the stimulus of an English demand, would be a more desirable debtor than their captive himself, whose financial condition had caused them some misgivings.

Confidence Misplaced in the Ex-Detective's Friends.

In publishing the proceedings of the Police Board this morning the papers announce that Ex-Detective Page has been re-instated and accompany the information with well-worded puffs for his efficiency. The facts are the official docket of the Board furnished the reporters last night contained not the slightest reference to Page and the Board did not reinstate him. No action whatever was taken with reference to him. The responsibility for this interpolation in the proceedings is a matter of inquiry about the Four Courts to-day and if the superserviceable friend of the ex-detective who played on the confidence of the morning reporters can be uncovered, he will bear a damaged reputation for veracity.

Page's connection with the department is not a matter of very great public interest, but the nature of it was truthfully stated in last evening's POST-DISPATCH. Page is in the employ of Vice-President Cupples and is receiving pay out of the Secret Service fund. He is required to report to Capt. Ferd Kennet, who has general instructions as to what use shall be made of him. In no other way is he recognized as having connection with the force. His friends, notably the Chief, are making strenuous efforts to get him back on the force. It is a question, however, whether they have not damaged his cause by their over-zealous support and by imposing on the newspaper men to get him prematurely puffed. There was some prospect that a motion to reinstate Page would come up before the Board last evening, but it did not. It may come up next Tuesday in which event the reporters on the morning papers will probably follow the board proceedings rather than the hope of Page's friends.

GENTS' low cut walking shoes are the newest styles on exhibition at Swope's, 311 North Fourth street.

THE great steamer Centennial takes her departure for New Orleans this evening. Thos. L. Davidson commands and Mr. Marsh, a rising young boatman, presides in the office.

LITTLE MISS FLORENCE ROCKWELL, aged two and one-half years, accompanied her father, T. J. Rockwell, Esq., on 'Change yesterday and was much admired by the members for her beauty and intelligence. The child recited quite a number of rhymes. She is a granddaughter of the late Capt. Thos. W. Rea.

THE river had declined five inches up to 12 m. to-day. By Monday a large space of the levee will be ready to wash off and use. Wouldn't it be a good thing for the Harbor Master to charter a tug to help the E. G. Smith to wash the mud from the landing as fast as the water falls? Our city fathers would not fail to render all necessary assistance to Capt. Geo. W. Ford in this matter. The health of the city as well as its commercial interest demand that the deposits be removed at once.

A PITTSBURG telegram says: The Batchelor, Buckeye State and Wyoming are due to-night. It is reported that the J. L. Woods grounded at Captina, and that the Wyoming lightened her off. The towboats Nixon and Alarm have arrived. The towboat Storm was sold to-day by Capt. Thos. R. Chester to Capt. Wm. Bay, and others, of Ironton. The Brownsville packets are unable to come below Dam No. 1 in consequence of low water. Mr. Charles M. [illegible]rman & Henderson, left for Cincinnati this afternoon. Capt. Wm. Evans, the veteran marine editor, has been engaged to write up a river column for the Pittsburg Sunday Globe.

ALLEN & BLAISDELL have built in all twenty iron boats at their South St. Louis works. They launched the hull of the iron tug for the Hazard Coal Company yesterday. Other boats on hand include the Texas Pacific transportation boat to be stationed at New Orleans. This boat will be all iron—hull, deck, outriggers, cylinder timbers, water-wheel beams, bridge trees and wheels; two [illegible]-inch cylinders, 8-feet stroke, working a [illegible]-foot wheel in diameter, with 14-feet length of bucket; two batteries of three steel boilers, and capacity to transfer twenty-four cars at a trip. When completed she will be the best transfer (the only all-iron) boat in the United States.

THE Cincinnati Gazette says: Capt. Albert Stein went to Louisville last night to look after the interests of the Chas. Morgan in the Cannon-Morgan collision case, recently decided against the Morgan. The opinion of the Court makes a few citations from leading admiralty cases concerning the rights of a vessel approaching another with the design of passing, which lay it down as a rule that the approaching boat takes on herself the risk of misjudgment, if the boat to be passed is guilty of no fault or negligence. Judge Barr then says that when the Cannon attempted to pass the Morgan she assumed the hazard arising from misjudgment concerning the distance between the two boats, provided the Morgan kept on in the same course she was pursuing when hailed, but, he continues, he was satisfied from the evidence that when the Morgan answered the signal of the Cannon in the affirmative, she, the Morgan, sheered out in the river toward the Cannon, and this caused the accident. He, therefore, considered the Cannon entitled to receive damages and referred the case to a commissioner to assess the amount.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES,
manufactured by the Stewart Manufacturing Co., are the best, and now is the time to buy. Until May 1 the $55 machine will be sold for $20 cash; or on time, $10 down and $1 per month; warranted new and first-class in every sense. The price is in consequence of the United States Court decision March 21. During the past three and one-half years I have sold 25,000 of these machines, and I do not know of a solitary instance where the purchaser is not perfectly happy. But the improved high-arm "New Stewart" will actually cure the most obstinate case of melancholy. It makes everybody smile but my competitors.
JOHN L. STANAGE, 114 North Sixth st.

PERSONAL—To Mrs. Grundy, and she is profiting by it—The word "Singer" is the name of a very popular sewing-machine, and of all the machines sold, three out of every five are of this kind. You must know that since the patents expired in 1877, anybody has a right to make these machines; but until the United States Court decided that the name "Singer" is common property, the name Singer was arrogated by one company, thus preventing honest competition. And the fact is that Singer Sewing-Machines, far superior to those made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, have been on the market for five years, which have been grossly and maliciously misrepresented as "spurious and bogus imitations," etc., because they were offered for less money; and because canvassers and peddlers told them so, the people believed these machines really were inferior, without stopping to reason for themselves. I give my word for it that the Singer Machines manufactured by THE STEWART MANUFACTURING COMPANY are superior to the Singer Company's make. I know them both. I have sold 25,000 of the "Stewarts," with a guarantee in the drawer of each, and bearing no complaint I refer with confidence to those who use them. Having just gained a legal victory to the right to use the name "Singer," I propose to give the public the benefit of it. I invite them to see it, and to buy the $55 machine for $20 cash, until May; or on time, $10 down and $1 per month for balance. I will cheerfully refund the money to any customer not satisfied with the bargain. John L. Stanage, 114 N. Sixth st.

Trustees' Sales.

TRUSTEE'S SALE—Whereas, Mary Clemens, Mary C. Morse, Henrietta T. Knowles and her trustee, Sarah L. Morse, by their deed dated October 29, 1874, recorded in the Recorder's office of the city of St. Louis in book 501, page 372, conveyed to the undersigned the following described real estate situated in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, to-wit: A lot of ground in block numbered four hundred and sixty-two of said City of St. Louis and described as follows: Beginning at a point in the north front line of Hickory street eighty-nine and one-half (89½) feet east of the eastern line of Ham street eighty feet, thence eastwardly and parallel with Hickory street twenty-two and six-twelfths (22 6-12) feet; thence southwardly and parallel with said Ham street eighty feet to the north line of said Hickory street and thence westwardly with said north line of Hickory street twenty-two feet and six-twelfths (22 6-12) to the point of beginning.

Also, a certain lot of ground situated on the north side of Chouteau ave., in block number four hundred and thirty of said city, and having a front of thirty-five feet by a depth of one hundred and forty feet to an alley, beginning at a point on the north line of Chouteau avenue, distant eastwardly fifty feet from the eastern line of Barlow street; thence running eastwardly along the northern line of Chouteau avenue thirty-five feet to the western line of a lot of Charles Wiggins; thence northwardly and along said Wiggins' western line one hundred and forty feet to an alley ten feet wide; thence along the southern line of said alley thirty-five feet to the eastern line of a lot of Margaret Buell; thence southwardly and along said eastern line of Margaret Buell's lot one hundred and forty feet to the place of beginning; bounded south by Chouteau avenue, north by an alley, west by property of Margaret Buell and east by property of Chas. Buell. And, whereas, the said conveyance was made to secure a certain note described therein; and whereas the note has become due and remains unpaid, therefore at the request of the holder of said note and in pursuance of the power in said deed contained, notice is hereby given that I will on offer and expose for sale, at public vendue, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. of that day, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, all and singular, the real estate above described at the east front door of the Court House in the city of St. Louis.

TWELVE PAGES.

The POST-DISPATCH has much the largest BONA FIDE circulation ever attained by any afternoon paper in St. Louis; it has a larger city circulation than any morning paper in St. Louis (except one); its receipts for circulation by carriers are ten times as large, and it sells twenty times as many papers on the streets, by news-boys, as all other afternoon publications combined.

JUDGING from the way that BLAINE handles the President in his fight against CONKLING it is an aggravated case of Syggignoscism.

WE sent out a small dove yesterday and it returned this morning with an Illinois sapling in its beak. We infer from this that the deluge in this neighborhood is at an end.

UNDER the new law assessments for taxation are returnable on the 1st of June, instead of the 1st of August as heretofore. It would be well for tax-dodgers to make a mem. of this fact.

AS we have no slave pen in St. Louis now it is thought by some people that we should have a chain-gang driven on the streets for the edification of strangers seeking a home in a progressive State.

A REQUIEM has been sounded over the remains of the New York World's Fair project. Now, where are those people who were so anxious a short time ago to enlarge the scope of the St. Louis Fair?

WE are assured this morning that the noble 306 will stand firmly by CONKLING. If the Stalwart Phalanx cannot serve him any better than it served GRANT at Chicago his political epitaph may be written.

AS we expected, BLAINE is blamed with the Administration war upon CONKLING. He is the wicked partner who keeps Mr. GARFIELD'S back-bone in a state of rigidity by passing his magnetic hands over it.

RATHER than see Mr. SCHURZ knocking about the country without adequate employment we will give him a nice place on the POST-DISPATCH. Our circulation is growing steadily and we feel almost strong enough now to support an Indian Department.

WHILE Prof. SWIFT was discovering that new comet the other day, Prof. PROCTOR was attaching his name to a star of the first magnitude in the right ascension at St. Joseph, in the State of Missouri. We would call the attention of scientists generally to the fact that we have whole constellations of the same kind left.

IT IS announced that GEN. LEW WALLACE is to have the Turkish Mission. This is the military genius who couldn't march 10,000 fresh troops from Crump's Landing to Shiloh to the music of the cannon at a faster rate than one mile an hour, clear day and good roads. Having exhausted Aztec literature the General will probably make MAHOMET the central figure in a Moslem romance after he settles down at the Sublime Porte.

THERE was quite an exciting wrangle in the House of Delegates last night over a proposition to have the city subscribe and pay for a lot of newspapers for members to light fires with. The little job, amounting to $364, went through, but there was no working of the oratorical bellows in behalf of a sprinkling ordinance. As the hot weather is drawing near it would not have been an act of treason toward the city to have pushed Mr. STERN'S ordinance to a third reading under a suspension of the rules.

WHATEVER may be said of Mr. CONKLING'S imperious manners and his affectation of superior greatness it must be admitted that he comes nearer being the Republican party than any other one man. He certainly elected GARFIELD, and that, too, after a plain understanding that his services were not to be forgotten. But for his active canvass in New York, backed as he was by the Columbian orator, GRANT, the Democracy would have carried the Empire State by 30,000, and that would have hung Mr. GARFIELD on a fence stake at Mentor.

MAYOR MEANS, of Cincinnati, has a notice posted up over his desk saying that "any advice wanted by the Mayor upon any subject will be asked for." This shows the insolence and bad breeding of the man. The sudden elevation of a distinguished nobody to a position of small powers and great responsibilities nearly always begets a display of intellect of about this size. We are pleased to know that the new Mayor of St. Louis is a man of broader guage than this Cincinnati pig iron peddler. He is open to advice at all times, whether it comes from Mr. FILLEY or an afternoon newspaper of great circulation. There is one peculiarity about him, however—he doesn't pay any attention to the advice after it is given to him.

VICTOR HUGO is ill now. The march of eminent men of the world toward the shadows, the mystery and the silence is hastening of late.—[Courier-Journal.

Just so. Don't you feel a small, dull pain at the back of your head occasionally?

UNDER the BRADY regime the Star Route thieves received $30,000 for carrying an empty mail bag on a steamboat from St. Louis to St. Paul from July 1, 1880, to March 31, 1881. No letters could be sent by this route without actually delaying them, as every point along the river was supplied by railway. Though his attention was repeatedly called to the swindle, Mr. BRADY did not put a stop to it until just before he was kicked out of office. Of course the rascal who had the contract contributed liberally to save Indiana for GARFIELD when called upon in the name of Liberty and Reform.

THERE is no question but that Mr. CARL SCHURZ has been offered the editorship of the elegant Evening Post, of New York. The Post is noted for its syntax and its pure, lofty thought, but it is neither so influential nor so widely circulated as the POST-DISPATCH of St. Louis. It is read chiefly by amateur poets, political theorists of the classic Greek school and book publishers. Of course a man of æsthetic tastes, such as Mr. S. possesses, would prefer New York to St. Louis as a place of residence, but an ex-Cabinet officer ought to catch on to a higher limb than a New York afternoon newspaper in his fall.

THE true inwardness of the GARFIELD-CONKLING situation is simply this: BLAINE is a positive force. He came within a hair's breadth of receiving the Presidential nomination in 1876. He came pretty near it again in 1880. Both times CONKLING was the man who defeated him. But for CONKLING, BLAINE would be President to-day. CONKLING declines to have any personal relations with BLAINE. Their feud is one of those that are irreconcilable and last for life. CONKLING never makes up. GARFIELD wants to be nominated again. He needs BLAINE'S following. BLAINE has probably concluded that he cannot be President himself and that the next best thing is to be the power behind GARFIELD. Men are human. Politicians with disappointed ambition are human. "To get even" is as natural a desire with a JIM BLAINE as with a JIM SMITH. This is all. BLAINE, thinking of '76 and '80, is simply enjoying the rare luxury of getting even with CONKLING.

IT IS expected that the city of Cincinnati will not present a pious aspect to-morrow. MAYOR MEANS, who was elected on a reform ticket by a combination of Democrats and Pharisee Republicans, has determined to carry out the STUBBS idea of Sunday and has issued an order to the police to close all saloons in the cityin the morning. When the publicans heard of the Mayor's determination they called on him and tried to persuade him to stop the running of street cars, milk wagons and ice wagons on the Lord's Day, but the Mayor thought that would be carrying the joke too far. He didn't want so much Sunday all at once. An attempt will be made to enforce the order against the saloons to-morrow. The saloon keepers are showing a disposition to resist with force and arms. They number about eighteen hundred, while the police can only muster three hundred clubs all told. As the rough fighting elements of the city are all on the side of the refreshment dealers, Mr. MEANS may not find it an easy thing to promote morality by cutting off the beer supply.

THE following little note has been unearthed by Star-Route Thief BRADY, by way of vindication, we suppose:

MENTOR, Ohio, Aug, 23, 1880.

MY DEAR HUBBELL: Yours of the 19th inst. received and contents noted. Please say to Brady that I hope he will give us all the assistance he can. I think he can help effectually. Please tell me how the departments generally are doing. As ever yours,

J. A. GARFIELD.

HON. J. A. HUBBELL, Washington, D. C.

The "Hon. J. A. HUBBELL," to whom the letter was written, was the Chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, whose sole business it was to levy assessments for blood-money on every official of the department, regardless of sex or color. The date of the letter shows that it was written just at the time when money was needed to carry Indiana. GARFIELD doubtless knew BRADY'S peculiar relations to the Star-Route Ring, and delicately referred to that when he said: "Please say to BRADY that I hope he will give us all the assistance he can. I think he can help effectually." Unless all signs fail, Mr. GARFIELD'S venal record is apt to receive an early exposure.

WHILE millions of people in Austria are struggling for a bare existence the great city of Vienna is en fete because of the approaching nuptials of the Crown Prince RUDOLPH, and enough money will be squandered on this nonsense to give every barefooted child in the Empire a new pair of shoes. The Queen of Belgium and her daughter STEPHANIE, who is to be the bride, have proceeded to Vienna with a grand flourish, have been received amid great display and are now quartered at the palace of Schoenbrunn, the historic home of MARIE THERESE and the scene of NAPOLEON'S high-daddy performances when he was engaged in the noble pastime of knocking kings off their thrones and kicking them for falling. Receptions, balls, fireworks and a general spree will be the order of the day and night in Vienna for a fortnight. A few months ago, when the betrothal of these interesting young people was announced, a band of a thousand trained singers went up to Belgium to serenade the young Princess in the name of delighted Austria. All this expense and noise over the nuptials of a pair of young people who are of no more consequence, so far as their joys and sorrows are concerned, than the son of a Tyrolean goat-hunter and the daughter of a Bohemian wood-chopper. It is a part of Kingcraft that these heartless alliances shall be made the occasion of grand display. It pleases the burden-bearing idiots who pay the taxes and impresses them with the glory and magnificence of their rulers. The Princess STEPHANIE is said to be a plain, well-disposed person, thoroughly accomplished and as good as she could be expected to be, considering her opportunities. The Crown Prince, who bears the name of the founder of the House of Hapsburg, is a very fair sort of young man for a Prince. He is a good-looking fellow, about twenty-three years of age, with little or no force of character, but it must be said to his credit that he does not seem inclined to the looseness and immorality which has made his Imperial father's name a joke among the half-world people of all Europe.

JEWELS FOR THE BALL.

An Exhibition of Rare Gems, Costly Jewels, Diamonds, Rubies, Sapphires, Pearls, Etc.

From the Globe-Democrat.

A remarkably beautiful collection of jewels of every variety, embracing all the fashionable devices which have appeared this season, may be seen at Jaccard's, corner Fifth and Olive streets. There are diamond solitaires in endless profusion; a diamond crescent and star to be worn as a pendant; hair ornament or lace pin, duplicate of the one made for the "Princess Louise" during her recent visit to this country, is one of the prettiest jewels in the collection. There are many fine examples of recent productions for gentlemen's wear. The Jaccard Jewelry Company is certainly to be congratulated upon its enterprise in providing so lavishly for those who desire to adorn their persons with rare jewels for the "grand opening" of the Southern on the evening of the 11th.

PERSONAL.

—President Garfield "likes to ride out alone on horseback, and takes no pleasure in fast horses."

—Brady keeps a cigar in his mouth all the time, in imitation of Grant. He rarely lights the weed, however.

—Mr. D. R. Locke (Nasby) is about to circumnavigate the world, going first to Australia. He can be spared.

—Lady Mandeville, formerly Miss Yznaga, of New York, wears in London a muff made out of a young panther's skin.

—A prominent physician in Paris estimates that half the children of that city die from short sleeves, low necks, short skirts and other imprudences in the dressing of children.

—The death of Gen. Joe Lane leaves only two surviving Generals of the Mexican war—Gen. Harney, aged 81, and Gen. Robert Patterson, of Philadelphia, now in his 90th year.

—An Indiana widow named Ishers, with eleven children, succeeded in marrying again the other day. She was evidently of the opinion that it was best to pool all her little Ishers.

—The Emperor William's health is causing much uneasiness at Berlin. He has been in the lowest spirits since the murder of his nephew, and has been less able to resist a cold which he caught some time ago. His family were very anxious to get him away from Berlin. He is now in Wiesbaden and early in June will probably go for five weeks to Ems.

Utilizing the "Masher."

ST. LOUIS, May 7, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your issue of the 5th inst. appeared a communication signed "Merchant," which has the ring of the true gentleman in it. The subject matter is treated well, but I think a few supplementary remarks would not be out of place. The genus homo, the "Masher," is not confined to St. Louis. All large cities are subject to the impudent stare of this modern product of society. In the rural districts and in small towns the "Masher" is unknown. Occasionally in those places he tries to prevail, but the climate is not congenial to his growth, and he must betake himself to the city, where his ears (always large) show to better advantage behind a brainless head, and where a clean shirt, new hat, clothes, boots, "makes the man." The "Masher" dresses well, but in nine cases out of ten he never earned the money that paid for what he wears. He is a strange compound of humanity. He walks like a mandarin duck, talks like a cockatoo and acts like one of his ancestors—a monkey. The question before "the House" is, "How are we going to utilize the 'Masher?'" To my mind he should not be driven from his favorite haunts; rather let him be tempted out to "mash" rocks on the street; also to clean the thoroughfares of mud and filth. Every "Masher" should be supplied with a pick and shovel, and when he is not mashing macadam he should be compelled to haul off the dirt. The city authorities should improvise a small cart, not as large as the hand carts now in use—these carts could be easily drawn by the mashers. Every masher could haul a cart, and "dump" or jump into the river at some convenient point, On Saturdays, it is estimated that at least three thousand mashers are to be seen on Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Olive and Franklin avenue. See what clean streets we would have if every one of these aimless, ambitionless, characterless, lazy, good-for-nothings were put to work "cleaning up." I would suggest the matter be taken up by the Citizens' Committee.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The Republican and Garfield.

LEBANON, MO., May 6, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Can you inform a reader why the ancient Republican is so editorially anxious that Democrats shall violate established rules of senatorial courtesy to confirm the Robertson nomination? What good can the South expect of J. A. Garfield, or what harm can he do the Democracy should it support any measure which may split Radicalism? As a Democrat we hope Mr. Garfield's present of flowers to one of those men "whose hand, so help him God, he would never clasp in friendship," may find fitting humiliation. We would be much gratified, too, if the aforesaid Republican would join the party to which by name it belongs, or kick loose as it did some years ago.

A Real Conundrum.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Having observed from the columns of your paper that you stand ever ready to serve both knowledge and justice, I would be pleased to have you answer just one conundrum for a poor devil who cannot afford a dictionary.

Question: Which is of the most importance to the busines men of Pine street, to have Conkling defeat President Garfield in the confirmation of Robertson or to have a flea put in Commissioner Turner's ear regarding the prolonged and disgraceful condition of Pine street as left by the reconstructors of the Planters' House? Respectfully

[The fair and frisky Alice is still living and is ready for another husband or two. She is playing around the country, but we are delighted to know that she will not inflict herself upon this community again this season.—ED. P.-D.]

An Opening for a Prayer Test.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

It is said that a Miss Tyler, a relative of the Baltimore Postmaster, has just been cured of an ailment of years' standing by the efficacy of prayer. The same remedy should be tried on the Postmaster.

Advice to an Infidel.

From the New York Sun.

Even though Col. Bob Ingersoll does not believe in hell, there are considerations which should dissuade him from consorting with Dorsey in any other than a purely professional capacity.

Death to Bossism.

From the New York Tribune.

It seems to be a season of second-bell ringing. The death knell of Bossism is about to be rung again. The ringing at Chicago in June last ought to have been sufficient.

Let Us Hope So.

From the Chicago Times.

In their efforts to use Gorham and Riddleberger and repudiation to break the solid Bourbon South, the Republicans may succeed in losing the solid Republican North.

Brady's Platform.

From the Chicago Times.

A free ballot, a tolerably fair count, and no Star-route investigations, is Brady's platform, the same on which Indiana appears to have been carried.

Can't Be Suppressed.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

The ambition of Billy Chandler may be nipped in the bud, but it will not be blighted. If he is foiled now, he will start a temperance crusade.

THE ST. LOUIS R. R.

Another Mass Meeting Pledges Itself Never to Use the Union Depot Line.

Another mass meeting of citizens living in the south end of the city and along the line of the South St. Louis Railroad was held last night at Union Park Hall. The attendance was especially large of people who live on Decatur street, at the point where the Union Depot Line is contesting the South St. Louis Road's right to use the Decatur street track. It was the chief object of the meeting to protest against the action of the Union Depot Line. Mr. Fritz Arendes, called the meeting to order. He said that the committee appointed at the previous meeting had seen the officials of the South St. Louis Line, and they were assured that the Company would make no attempt to lay a second track on Decatur street before the court decided the question next Monday. Caspar Krug reported for the committee of May 4 that they were satisfied that the South St. Louis Line had done everything in their power to avoid the necessity of a double track on Decatur street, and that the fault all lay with the Union Depot Line. The report, which was signed by Arendes, Krug, Wm. Von Ahren and H. Diefenbach, concluded by a demand that the citizens use all their power in behalf of the South St. Louis Line. This report was immediately handed over to a committee, consisting of Messrs. Arendes, Krug, Mette, Trandt and Hagen. In a short time they reported, protesting against the action of the South St. Louis Line as detrimental to the interests of South St. Louis people, and pledging the people not to use the Union Depot Line at all if a double track was necessitated on Decatur street. The pledge was given by the signatures of nearly all present.

Conflicting Contractors.

A suit is on trial to-day in the United States District Court involving a sum of money in dispute under a contract for the Compton Hill Reservoir. James C. Babbitt, assignee of W. D. Curry, sues the firm of Sheehan & Loler upon a note executed to Murphy Henderson by whom a contract for the storage construction of the reservoir was made. The note was an undertaking to pay to Murphy & Henderson a certain sum when the commissioners should have paid for the work done on the reservoir. The settlement was made at the completion of the contract, including payment of ten per cent reserve, and the note was assigned by Murphy & Henderson to Mr. Curry, whose affairs afterwards passed into bankruptcy. The defendants, Sheehan & Loler, denied the claim of the Curry estate to the note and set up a series of counter claims against Mr. Curry who was a silent partner in the contract for the reservoir. The sub-contractors alleged that certain material to be furnished them for the work by the contracting firm was not of the kind required to abide the terms of the agreement and the sub contractors were put to heavy expense accordingly. The case is complicated and the evidence somewhat difficult for a jury to determine.

Judgment Against the Sisters.

The jury in the note suit, David Finnessy's administrator against the St. Louis Hospital Association, which has been on trial for several days in Circuit Court No. 5, returned a verdict this morning in favor of the administrator for $4,678.30. The particulars of this case have been published in the POST-DISPATCH. David Finnessy loaned to the Sisters $3,919 during his lifetime and when his last illness occurred he was removed to the Hospital. At that time he released the note and the administrator of his estate afterwards brought suit on the ground that undue influence had been exercised at the hospital and that the debt was released when the creditor was not in a sound mental condition. The Sisters relied upon the defense that Mr. Finnessy released the note of his own free will and accord and asked the Sisters simply to see that he was properly buried. The case was ably handled by Messrs. Josh Tatum and Eber Peacock for the plaintiff and by A. J. P. Garesche for the defense.

The Woman's Exchange.

The sale of aprons at the Woman's Exchange to-day progresses finely. Aprons are now very fashionable, and this sale has met with a regular boom. Owing to the withdrawal of the announcement for an exhibition last week the attendance has not been what it would otherwise have been. It seems that since misunderstanding as to time existed, but the increased attendance to-day has caused the management to arrange for a continuation of the sale next Monday and Tuesday. More than one-third of the stock of aprons have already been sold at the Exchange rooms, and orders have been received for more. The ladies are much encouraged. The annual election will occur in two weeks, at which time new officers will be elected, as the regulations of the society do not permit any lady to hold the same office for two successive terms.

WILL OPEN next MONDAY,

ELEGANT new styles of gents' party shoes at Swope's.

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

Two common drunks were disposed of in the Police Court this morning. Three dollars and costs were imposed in both cases, and the fines stayed in the payment of costs.

Annie Johnson, a young colored woman, was arrested last night on a charge of petit larceny, preferred by Wm. T. Haints. Mrs. Johnson was a servant in Haints' family, and when leaving took several articles with her belonging to Mr. Haints.

The negro shot by Ben Douglass, in East Carondelet, a few days ago, is rapidly recovering, and will be around in about a week. The ball entered the abdomen, and was taken out of the fleshy part of the right leg. No account has been had of Douglass thus far.

HOT CORN.

False Reports as to the Condition of Corn in Elevators.

Some Damage Reported on Shipments by Rail to the South.

Just now there are reports of "hot corn in elevators" being circulated on 'Change, but so far they have had little effect upon the market, as they are not generally believed. It is rather early in the season for these reports to get out, and only the very warm weather of the past few days following the steady rains that have fallen could have produced them, though parties who believe there is "hot corn" in the elevators think it is because most of the corn received from Iowa has been in poor condition, having been covered by snow during the past winter, and coming into market damp and too poor to grade, and such grain only too readily heating with warm weather.

The elevator men state that these reports of "hot corn" are nonsensical and are only circulated to break the market down. D. P. Slattery, of the St. Louis Elevator, says that even rejected corn is cool and in prime condition, and certain parties in this market are sacking it and selling it for No. 2 mixed. Upon being asked if there was not danger of the corn heating if the elevator was compelled to shut down by the high water and thus not allowing the corn to be moved and kept cool, Mr. Slattery said: "The St. Louis Elevator will protect this market if her corn heats, and there will be no loss to parties owning this corn, but there is no danger of the corn heating."

John Fears, one of the most efficient and trusted grain inspectors in this market, stated yesterday that the corn in elevators here was in excellent shape and in no danger of heating "There has been two million bushels of corn shipped from here so far this year and all of it arrived at New Orleans in good condition."

On the other side comes testimony of shippers from this market which would show that corn had arrived in a heated condition upon being shipped south, not at New Orleans, particularly, but at interior towns.

Geo. Small, of Chas. P. Burr & Co., had received numerous complaints from his correspondents in interior towns in the South as to the damaged condition of corn shipped from this market.

Geo. Massengale, of Massengale Brothers, was very emphatic in his statements. He said it was wonderful the amount of corn among the interior towns of the South in a damaged condition. This corn was not alone shipped from St. Louis, but came from Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, and a large proportion was found heating and damaged upon arrival at its destination. It had come to such a pass that his firm had positively declined to handle corn for shipment South. He did not claim that St. Louis elevators had hot corn in them now. It was very possible now that the corn was in good condition. In appearance it looked well, bright and glossy, dry and rattled when shaken, but nevertheless considerable of it, that inspected out No. 2 when shipped from here, was found damaged upon arrival at the South. The cause for this he could not explain. It was said that a great deal of the Iowa corn had been gathered and stacked when frozen, and during the winter was covered with snow. When shipped in sacks or in box cars South, receiving no air from the time it left here until opened at its destination, may have caused it to germinate.

Messrs. C. P. Burr & Co. and Massengale Brothers last evening sent John Fears, a member of the Board of Grain Inspectors, to Augusta, Ga., to examine the corn sent from St. Louis, see in what condition it is and, it possible, arrive at the reason for this change in its condition.

P. P. Connor, of Connor Bros., had had some complaints of corn shipped from here South. In a lot of 2,000 sacks sent to New Orleans a considerable portion was found damaged upon its arrival there.

European exporters have so far made no complaints regarding bulk shipments of corn by river to New Orleans.

Chas. F. Orthwein says all the corn shipped by his firm to New Orleans has arrived there in good condition, and they will continue these shipments, although feeling some uneasiness upon the subject of future shipments, as is always the case in May and June, which are the critical months for corn shipped South.

George Martin's shipments to New Orleans all arrived there in good shape, so far. There is some moisture left in corn in early spring that soon commences to ferment when the grain is kept from the air, but in July & August the corn is thoroughly dried out and there is no more danger.

D. R. Francis had shipped no corn South this year, but upon a shipment of No. 2 mixed corn to Macon, Ga., last year he lost largely, owing to its arriving there in bad condition—heated and damaged.

Another exporter said that he told his New Orleans correspondents a month ago that he would not handle corn for them except he could buy it free on board at New Orleans and without his taking any risk. Two weeks ago he received an order to buy 100,000 bushels of corn and was offered the grain in this market at a satisfactory figure, but he advised his correspondents not to touch it, and the trade was not completed.

The testimony given above will clearly show that the only "hot corn" is that that has been shipped in close box cars or sacks over a long route to Southern towns, whose receivers are noted for their numerous complaints and claims for reclamations on shipments to them. All the corn that has been sent by river in bulk to New Orleans has arrived there in perfect condition so far this year. There is no "hot corn" in the elevators here and there is no danger of there being any. A little no grade now arriving may be out of condition—damp, etc.—but this does not touch the other grades, and cannot affect their quality.

A Good Showing.

Comparing the official statement of the Franklin Bank, published at some other place, with the one made ten months ago, we find that the deposits have increased $356,605 17, and that the handsome sum of $34,462 31 has been earned for the surplus fund from July 3, 1880, up to April 30, 1881.

THE DAVENPORT CANAL.

What the Missouri Delegation Will Do at the Convention.

The Governor yesterday completed the list of delegates to the Davenport Canal Convention which meets on May 25 and 26 The gentlemen who will represent Missouri at the Convention are Messrs M. L. Clardy, Silas Woodson, George Wright, J. O. Broadhead, D. P. Rowland, John F. Phillips and H. F. Latchaw. A reporter met Mr. Wright this morning and asked him what attitude Missouri was going to take in the Convention. "That depends," he replied, "largely upon the shape matters take at the time. You understand the idea is to endorse the building of a canal from Davenport to Hennepin, Illinois, where it will join the canal now running into Lake Michigan. There are two sides to the question. This canal will divert a great deal of the trade from its direct down the river course to the sea, and send it by way of the Welland canal to Montreal, where it will be reshipped to Europe. On the other hand, if we object to the appropriation we will antagonize the Congressmen of that section and add so much more difficulty to the passage of decent appropriation bills for the Mississippi. As far as I am concerned I have not yet made up my mind how I shall act."

Mr. Wright's indecision is reflected on the floor of the Exchange, for there is a great deal of difference of opinion as to how the Missouri delegation at the Convention shall act.

Uniforming the Police by Contract.

The only dissatisfaction found with the arrangements made by the Police Board for supplying the force with summer clothing and helmets seems to rest with the retail tailors. The contract price for the suits is $17, which is from $5 to $10 less than they have cost heretofore. The helmet is furnished at $2 50, about a dollar cheaper than in past years. The Commissioners, notably Mr. Kinkead, who is the purchasing member, have given a good deal of time to these two contracts and obtained bids for both hats and suits from a number of reputable houses. They regard the terms as entirely satisfactory and the opinion is shared by the force generally.

In addition to the directions in the grounds it contains instructive sketches on each class of animals, giving their age and where and how they were taken.

THE National Guards have recently made propositions to the Bain Zouaves to leave the Police Reserves and join the Guards. Last night the Zouaves held a meeting, and appointed a committee to confer with the National Guards as to the terms of their admittance. The change will probably be made, and the Zouaves become attached to Battery A.

REV. W. POPE YEAMAN, D. D., Corresponding Secretary Missouri Baptist General Association, makes a very encouraging report of the work of the missionaries of that body. During the first five months of the present fiscal year there have been 345 conversions and 238 baptisms. During the whole of the last fiscal year there were only 313 conversions and 186 baptisms.

THE St. Louis Book and News Company complain that some party calling himself C. H. Corbett is soliciting subscriptions and receiving money for the "Young Ladies' Journal," a periodical which he represents to be published by the Book and News Company. The B. and N. Company does no such thing, and never heard of such a journal and has no solicitors.

THE Missouri Immigration Society will make arrangements with the proprietors of some boarding houses to receive German emigrants at reduced rates. When the emigrant parties arrive in this city they usually send out two or three men into the State to prospect and buy lands, and in the interval the parties remain in the city so that it has become necessary to make this provision.

REV. W. V. TUDOR, D. D., will preach at St. John's M. E. Church on Sunday at 10:45 a. m. and at 8 p. m. ## SOUTHERN HOTEL BALL.

Meeting of the Committee—Arrangements for Arrival and Departure of Carriages.

At the meeting of the Southern Hotel Executive Committee S. N. Laflin reported in behalf of the Finance Committee that the demand for tickets was increasing and that the requisite funds would be easily raised. He also instructed the chairman of sub-committees to report to him fully at the earliest possible moment. The sale of tickets will be discontinued on Monday evening, and all desiring to purchase must do so before that time. On motion it was ordered that complimentary tickets be sent to Commodore C. K. Garrison of New York, J. M. Randall of Lafayette and Mrs. David Nathan of this city. A request was presented on behalf of those holding tickets, who do not wish to attend the ball, that the hotel be opened to them for visitation and inspection during the afternoon. This was decided to be impracticable, as interfering with the work of the Decorating Committee. Parlor Number 34 has been reserved for the use of the Reception and Floral Committees on the night of the ball, and members of these committees will report there, where they will receive instructions and badges.

The following order from the Carriage Committee was read before the committee:

SOUTHERN HOTEL BALL CARRIAGE ORDERS.

Carriages bringing guests will drive to the ladies' entrance on Walnut street (just west of the main entrance) facing east, and will drive off toward Fourth street. No carriage will be allowed to turn and drive off west on Walnut street, but must drive east as far as Fourth street. No carriage bringing guests will be allowed to drive in from Fourth street, but must come from Fifth street and face east.

CALLING FOR GUESTS.

Carriages will stand on Fourth street and on Walnut, east of Fourth street, and when calling for guests will drive in from Fourth street on Walnut, facing west, and will drive out west at least as far as Fifth street.

Policemen will see that no carriage is permitted to enter Walnut street between Fourth and Fifth before 11 o'clock, except those who enter from Fifth and drive out toward Fourth, and after 11 o'clock only those entering from Fourth street, facing west, and driving out toward Fifth street.

E. C. SIMMONS,
Chairman.

The Chairman of the Executive Committee requested a full attendance at the meeting on Monday, as that will probably be the last session.

OPEN TO FT. WORTH.

The Missouri Pacific Railway.

Having completed its Texas Division to FORT WORTH will from this date run Coaches and Pullman Sleeping Cars through to that point, DAILY, by the 8:40 p. m. train from St. Louis, arriving at 11:30 a. m. the second morning. This affords to passengers the shortest line and three hours the quickest time between the above cities. The Through Cars to be run in this line are entirely new and of the finest description. Tickets to Fort Worth and points West, on Texas and Pacific Railway, are on sale at 115 North Fourth street, and at Union Depot, St. Louis.

F. CHANDLER,
General Passenger Agent.

Highway Robbery.

Marcus B. Finell, a young man of prepossessing appearance, is locked up at the Chestnut Street Station on a charge of highway robbery. About two days ago Finell made the acquaintance of a young man named W. G. Davis on the Iron Mountain road, near De Soto. Davis imparted the information to his new found friend that he had in his possession about $31 and several pocket articles of value, among which was a pretty dagger. When they arrived at a lonely part of the road Finell borrowed Davis' dagger and then threatened to kill him if he refused to turn over his money and valuables. Davis complied with the request, and after threatening to kill his victim if he attempted to follow, Finell started for St. Louis. Davis met him this evening and pointed him out to a police officer. Finell stoutly denied that he had ever seen Davis before, but the dagger, a collar button bearing Davis' initials and several other articles of which the police had a description were found in his possession, besides $18 of the money.

The South St. Louis in Operation.

The South St. Louis Street Railroad Company commenced operating the northern end of their line at noon to-day. The temporary southern terminus is at Lafayette street, there being a gap from that point to Russell avenue. The first car, rented from the Market Street Line, started over the route at 11:30 under the charge of Conductor Paul Martin. Superintendent Sauer accompanied it on the trial trip. It is the plan of the company to put in an omnibus to run between Lafayette street and Russell avenue until arrangements can be made to build or to operate over the Gravois road along Decatur street.

MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS.

Wayman Crow's Generous Gift to the City of St. Louis.

Description of the Building—Memorial Hall, Sculpture Galleries, Etc.

The opening of the St. Louis Museum of Fine Arts, Lucas Place and Nineteenth street, to be marked by a simple ceremonial dedication, followed by a reception in the art galleries on Tuesday evening next, will claim the attention of all who are interested in the development of art in St. Louis. Although the beautiful temple erected by Mr. Crow is set apart for the uses of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, an important arm of the Washington University under the direction of Professor Ives, the gift may be considered as one extended to the entire community and as such it will be generally regarded for the practical benefits which will ensue. The establishment of an art school has always been a part of the University plan and in 1875 a drawing department was opened and an evening school. This department was reorganized in 1879, and rules were adopted in an ordinance providing for donations to promote æsthetic education under the conditions of which Mr. Wagman Crow has erected the school and museum, affixing to the main portion of the structure the name "Museum of Fine Arts" and to the auditorium the title of "Memorial Hall." The officers of the school have secured a large number of art works, originals and reproductions, suitable to the uses of the institution. Some have been donated, but the greater portion represents the purchase of the Museum board, composed as follows:

Board of Control—James E. Yeatman, President: Edwin C. Cushman, Secretary; George E. Leighton, Wm. G. Eliot, John B. Henderson, Charles Parsons, Daniel Catlin, Ethan A. Hitchcock, John R. Shepley, Thos. E. Tutt, Halsey C. Ives, ex-officio.

Committee on Finance—Charles Parsons, Daniel Catlin, Thomas E. Tutt.

Committee on Museum Property—John R. Shepley, Ethan A. Hitchcock, Edwin C. Cushman, Halsey C. Ives, ex-officio.

Committee on Exhibition—John R. Shepley, Charles Parsons, Daniel Catlin, H. L. Dousman, Ben. W. Clark, Halsey C. Ives, ex-officio.

A memorial tablet to be placed in the grand vestibule will read as follows:

"As a memorial of Wayman Crow, Jr. born 1852, died 1878, this edifice dedicated to the uses of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, is erected by his father and mother and his sisters: Cornelia L. Carr, Emma C. Cushman, Mary I. Emmons, Isabel Kealhofer, A. D. 1880."

The museum fronts on Lucas Place 138 feet and extends 155 feet along Nineteenth street. The architecture is a combination of the Italian and Florentine order, with certain modifications adopted to modern use. The height of the building is 66 feet, and it is covered with an imposing double mansard roof of the Italian style of ornamentation. The front is constructed of rough and cut stone with trimmings of artistic design. Over the main entrance, which is approached by a broad stone flight with cut facings is a bust of Phidias, and over the windows, right and left, are busts of Michael Angelo and Raphael. The interior is fitted in oak and walnut and the decoration is simple Greek in warm neutral tints. The Pompeian red predominates in the coloring of the upper portion of the vestibules. The walnut finishing adds greatly to the rich effect of the interior. From the grand vestibule there are two doors leading to the Memorial Hall, which may be considered one of the finest art auditoriums in the country. It has a seating capacity for 700 and is designed for lectures, concerts, exhibitions, etc. The walls are finished in Pompeian red and the ceiling presents the Greek style of ornamentation. There are placed around the hall trophies of art, historic busts and reproductions of Hercules and Mercury. The seats slope towards the stage which is set in a niche at the north end, exquisitely finished. The acoustic properties of the hall are excellent, and it is admirably lighted and ventilated.

Seven rooms or galleries on the right and left of the vestibule are devoted to sculpture. The casts are arranged in chronological and ethnological order. Here may be found the figure of Amenophis III, the lid of the sarcophagus of Sebaski; the head of Babestos; a slab copy of the Harpy Tomb; a sarcophagus of the Muses; Hermes and the infant Bacchus; the Townley Venus: the Venus de Milo; the Apollo Belvedere, "Diana and the Stag," etc. The collection was selected by Prof. Ives from the art centers of Europe, and it embraces 340 pieces. The picture galleries are placed at the south end of the upper floor, approached by two handsome staircases. There are five of these apartments fitted with the latest improvements for light. Upon the walls are one hundred and fifty superb canvasmeses, a loan collection from all the private galleries in the city. This is the finest display of art treasures ever recorded in the West. The arrangement of the choice works was entrusted to Messrs. Pettes & Leathe. Here may be seen a genuine Turner and a Carlo Marotti. The exhibition will open to the public on Wednesday morning and remain open for several weeks, at a small admission fee of twenty-five cents. The other portion of the upper floor of the Museum is set apart for studios for the advanced classes, male and female, with toilet rooms and all conveniences. The architects of the Museum, Messrs. Peabody & Stern, have presented a fine work in the Lucas Place structure, and much credit may be taken by Mr. August H. Becker for his efforts in frescoing the entire interior. Mr. Crow will formally convey the property on Tuesday evening to the St. Louis School and Museum of Fine Arts, and Chancellor Eliot will pass the deed over to the Board of Control named above. Mr. J. E. Yeatman, the President, will make a brief response, and acknowledgment on the part of the public will be made in turn by Carl Schurz, John B. Henderson and ex-Gov. Stanard The cost of the building has been upwards of $150,000, and the treasures now within its walls represent a value of $400,000. Cards have been issued for the inaugural reception on Tuesday evening, but the doors will be open to the general public on Wednesday morning.

Where is the Humane Society.

If the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals means to accomplish anything let it begin by making an example of the man—if that word be not a misnomer—who so cruelly beat a mule at the corner of Poplar and Main streets this morning. Poplar street from the Levee to Main street is in a very bad condition. The team had a large coal wagon heavily loaded, and it was almost impossible for his team to move it. He drove two heavy bay wheel horses and a lighter horse and mule in the lead. He became angry at the slow progress he was making and leaping from his saddle he seized the mule by the bit and proceeded to pummel it with the but of a black snake whip. Not satisfied with this he snapped the line in the extreme loop of the brace bit, and standing back of the mule proceeded to flay it in the most unmerciful manner, the blood following his blows, and as the animal sprang forward he would jerk it back upon its haunches. Quite a crowd gathered around and a man stepped forward and politely but firmly told the driver that he must desist. The teamster's number is 45.

Trustees' Sales.

State Savings Association and others, plaintiffs,
vs
John Wickham, trustee, Henry Shreve Carter et al., defendants
Case No. 55,286.
In the Circuit Court for the city of St. Louis.
(Foreclosure under Deed of Trust.)

BY virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court, for the city of St. Louis, in the above entitled cause, the undersigned will sell to the highest bidder, at public auction, on the premises, on between the hours of 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 5 o'clock in the afternoon of that day, the following described real estate situated in the county (now city) of of St. Louis, containing (23.66) twenty-three and 66-100 acres, subdivided by me under and by virtue of the decree in this cause into four lots or parcels of ground bounded and described as follows:

1. Lot 1, having a front on the east line of Snead avenue of 476 feet and 10 inches, and extending eastwardly to lot No. 4 of this subdivision, on which it fronts 477 feet and 9½ inches, the north line being 559 feet and 10½ inches, and the south line 543 feet and 4 inches in length, being bounded on the north by the centre line of the track and south by land now or formerly of Derrick A. January, and containing 6.04 acres.

2. Lot. 2, having a front on the east line of Snead avenue of 476 feet and 10 inches, and extending eastwardly to lot No. 3 of this subdivision, on which it fronts 477 feet and 9½ inches, the north line being 576 feet and 5 inches in length, and the south line 559 feet and 10½ inches in length, being bounded on the north by Bircher Road 20 feet wide, laid out by the commissioners in the partition of Ann Biddle's estate. and south by the center line of the tract, and containing 6.22 acres.

3. Lot 3, having a front on the west line of Papin avenue of 478 feet and 7 inches, and extending westwardly to the east line of lot 2 of this subdivision, on which it fronts 477 feet and 9½ inches, the north and south lines being 520 feet in length, being bounded on the north by the Bircher Road, 20 feet wide, laid out by the commissioners in the partition of Ann Biddle's estate, and south by the center line of the tract, and containing 5.70 acres.

4. Lot 4 having a front on the west line of Papin avenue of 478 feet and 7 inches and extending westwardly to the east line of lot 1 of this subdivision, on which it fronts 477 feet and 9½ inches, the north and south lines being 520 feet in length, being bounded on the north by the centre line of the tract, and on the south by land now or formerly owned by Derrick A. January, and containing 570 acres; each of said lots will be sold separately to the highest bidder.

Also all right, title and interest of said Henry S. Carter to the following described tract or parcel of land situated in the county (now city) of St. Louis, State of Missouri, in the Grand Prairie Common Fields, in township 45 north, range 7 east of the 5th principal meridian commencing at a stone on a line between United States Surveys Nos. 1587 and 1592, which stone is fourteen arpens westwardly from the eastern front line of the said Grand Prairie Common Fields; running thence north 30 degrees east nine chains thirty-two links to a stone which is on the line between U. S. Surveys 1407 and 1519: thence north 60 degrees west six chains to a stone; thence north thirty-five degrees west eighteen chains and sixty-three links to a stone; thence south 21½ degrees west seventeen chains and ninety-two links to a stone, which is on a line between said surveys 1587 and 1592: thence with said line south 60 degrees east twenty-six chains and thirty-four links to the place of beginning; bounded eastwardly and northwardly by land formerly of Col. John O'Fallon, westwardly by land formerly of Henry M. Shreve, and southwardly by said survey 1592. containing thirty acres more or less, being the undivided (1-6) one sixth thereof, subject to the life estate of Walker R. Carter thereon.

Terms of sale, one-third cash on the day of sale and the other two-thirds to be paid in one and two years, with six per cent interest on the deferred payments, and to be secured by deeds of trust on the property sold.

JOHN WICKHAM,
16V Special Commissioner.

TROUBLE BREWING.

Fourteenth Street Macadam the Casus Belli.

Henry Perkinson States His Intention of Barricading the Street.

There has been for the past four or five years a great deal of trouble, especially in the north and south ends of the city, between the contractors who have been macadamizing and grading the streets and the people against whom the special tax bills for the work are directed. In some cases the matter has been fought out legally, but in North St. Louis there are very good indications that the controversy will take a shape not contemplated by the law in such cases made and provided.

To state the case from the beginning of it will probably be the quickest way of arriving at an intelligent understanding. Henry Perkinson, along in 1872, secured a contract from the city for curbing, guttering, macadamizing and making crosswalks on Fourteenth street from Penrose avenue to Grand avenue. The work was not done until 1876, and $2,000 of the amount due the contractor, for which special tax bills have been issued, is still due. Naturally he has tried to collect this money, and among others he brought suit against James McGrath, the well known head of the Fenians, to compel him to pay his share Both of the gentlemen went at the litigation with an enthusiasm and an energy, which very soon had the whole matter before the Court of Appeals, and there it was decided that it was the duty of the contractor to see that he has a valid contract. The owner of the property is under no obligation to examine whether all the formalities have been complied with in letting out the work, and when he sees a man making improvements on his land without his direction or consent he has undoubtedly a right to suggest to the city authorities that the work should be done according to the terms which the city has imposed upon the contractor. While the work was in progress Mr. McGrath had objected to the manner in which it was being done, and had compelled Perkinson to undo parts of it and do it over again; and after it was finished the City Engineer compelled the contractor to keep the street in order for two years before he consented to release his securities. Naturally Perkinson is worked up about the matter to a point where he has determined to employ extra legal remedies, and he claims that he owns the great part of Fourteenth street from Penrose to Grand avenues, and has a right to do with it what he pleases—either to tear it up or to barricade it. The controversy is creating a great deal of a stir in North St. Louis where it is believed that a very serious interruption of travel will grow out of the difference. Fourteenth street is the route taken by the Benton-Bellefontaine Railway Line from Penrose to the water tower, and if Mr. Perkinson carries out his threats, as everyone believes that he will, the cars will be at least temporarily stopped.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter saw Mr. Perkinson last night and from him obtained the following story which runs about as follows: "Yes, I mean to do something about it, there is over $2,000 worth of my work and material down in that street that nobody has to pay for apparently, and I'm going to get the benefit of it in one way or another."

"But how?"

"Well, I will either tear up the work I have done or I will barricade the street. I am not supposed to be a great public benefactor that I should build a street for people to travel on out of my own pocket."

"But the courts have decided——"

"I can't help that. I have done the work and paid out my money and I can't get any satisfaction out of anybody. The courts may be right technically—I don't know anything about that; but the bottom facts in the case are just this: I build a street that is a great public convenience, used by thousands daily, under contract with the city. While building it I was compelled to tear a lot of my work to pieces and do it all over again in order to suit some of the people who won't pay me now, and after it was finished they made me keep it in order for two years in order to prevent a suit against my securities. They had all the fun they wanted, but when I come in for my money it all changed, Judge Bakewell said that the contractor was supposed to know the law and must suffer if he does not. I know of cases where the Supreme Court thought that Judge Bakewell didn't know the law. He is paid for not knowing it and I have to pay for not knowing it.

"Have you no legal remedy?"

"I can't get the case into the Supreme Court, and consequently I am going to get back my work. I own that street more than the city does the limestone rock that I put down there. It is mine till I'm paid for it, and I'm going to take it back, somewhat the worse for wear."

"They say you intend to barricade the street?"

"So I do. I don't intend to let people travel over my property and spoil it; every wagon that goes along that street just crushes and ruins so much more of my material."

"And the street cars?"

"I can't help the street cars. They have no more right to travel over my macadam than they have over my backyard."

"When do you intend to begin?"

"Very shortly. I'm not quite ready yet—but you can depend on this that I'm going to get that macadam back if it costs me $20,000 to do it."

"That will be a serious inconvenience to travel?"

"Nobody seems to be sitting up at night grieving over the inconveniences I have suffered over this thing."

"How are you going to block the street?"

"You wait a day or two and you will see."

Mr. Perkinson is a well known contractor in North St. Louis. He lives on Grand avenue, just across the street from the Church of the Holy Name. Those who know him say that he is quite capable of carrying out his threat, and he has plenty of resources behind him in waging a war of this kind. He has a large number of his employes, and several other contractors who are similarly situated with regard to newly worked streets are backing Mr. Perkinson in the fight and will supplement his forces with their own. The plan seems to be to make attack suddenly and without warning. The dwellers and property owners along Fourteen street do not anticipate any blockade. They think that threat a ruse to blind them to Perkinson's real intentions, but they expect to wake up to-morrow or next Sunday morning and find a heavy force of men and teams at work removing the macadam and the curbing from the street. The attack will be made after midnight on a Saturday night in order to avoid an injunction.

"L'Afrique."

Wayman McCreery's comic opera: "L,-Afrique," is to be produced at the Olympic on Monday evening May 16. Great interest attaches in musical circles to this event, and a representative audience will gather to pass judgment upon the merits of the talented young composer's work. The libretto has been carefully prepared by Will Schuyler. The dialogue is bright, humorous and entertaining, and the poetic vein is well sustained throughout the storm which treats of love and valor expressed in music that cannot fail to become popular. The melodies are well calculated to please the ear and all the passages are stamped with the charm of originality, while the choruses are peculiarly effective. "L'Afrique" is a bright little work and it will be presented at the Olympic with a cast fairly representing the city's best voices, as follows:

Capt. Fitzhugh Montague Jones, Mr. Edward Dierkes; Lieut. Geoffry Plantagenet Hamilton De Bracy, Mr. Phil Branson; Mynheer Arent Van Zwickenboot, Mr. Alfred Poindexter; Sergeant Tops, Mr. W. G. Smyth; Georgiana Montague Jones, Miss Cora Carpenter; Alice, her maid, Miss Pauline Schuler. Chorus—Sopranos: Mrs. Pritchard, Mrs. Hamilton, Miss Matthews, Miss Libby, Miss Haggerty, Miss Pitman, Miss Pritchard, Miss Schuler, Miss Harrison, Miss Pale, Miss Attos, Mrs. Hayward, Mrs. Audubon, Miss Adams, Miss Schofield, Miss Schuler, Miss Sherrick, Miss Anderson, Miss English, Miss Wait, Miss Lindsay; tenors, Messrs. Crawford, Buskitt, McIlvane, Hopper, Mills, Guion, Kilgen, McKenna, McNeil, Mitchell; basses, Messrs. Norcross, Ryan, Hoeg, McGaffey, Robyn, Baumgartner, Cornell, Clark, Chartrand, Tomilson.

Miss Cora Carpenter is entrusted with the role of Georgiana Jones. Her vocal qualities are well appreciated here and she has a charming part to fill. Mr. Phil Branson's superb tenor will be heard to advantage in the role of the young lieutenant. The Boer chief will be personated by Mr. Alfred Poindexter, who has some excellent solo work, and Mr. Edward Dierkes will display his vocal and dramatic power in the role of the British captain commanding the fort. Sergeant Tops will fall to Mr. W. G. Smyth, who can do justice to the part, and in fact much judgment has been exercised in assigning the principal roles. The little opera will be handsomely presented with all the accessories of the Olympic establishment.

A Fine Piece of Railroad Building.

The most elaborate piece of railroad building done in St. Louis for some time is the section which has been put down on the Western division of the Wabash to get under the Jefferson Avenue bridge. After the grading was completed limestone blocks were placed on edge, closely laid, and on top of these was put an eight-inch layer of macadam. Ties of the finest and heaviest quality are on top of the macadam, and then come new rails. A road-bed is thus obtained over which the cars run with scarcely a perceptible jar.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

The Eads Kindergarten celebrated May day yesterday with appropriate exercises.

The Young Men's Sodality last night elected officers for the ensuing year. Hanson Rosin was chosen Prefect.

At noon to-day the Young Men's Christian Association gave the Teachers' Exposition of the International Sunday School Lessons.

Mr. Jno. Murdock, editor of the Highlander, Inverness, Scotland, lectures at Mercantile Library Hall to-morrow night. Subject: "British Land Laws," Mayor Ewing will preside.

A party of Eastern capitalists have been viewing the fatness of the land about St. Louis for the past twenty-four hours. They expect to become interested in mining property about Iron Mountain.

The Police Commissioners ground out quite a grist of business yesterday. The contract for uniform helmet hats was let to M. J. Steinberg at $2 50 each. All furloughs asked were granted, and Charles Page, ex-detective, was reappointed on the force and was assigned to the Central District.

Capt. A. H. Bogardus and W. T. Mitchell, of Richmond, Virginia, this afternoon indulge in a pigeon shoot, 100 birds each, 30 yards rise, from five ground traps, use of both barrels, English rules, for $500 a side. Mitchell beat Bogardus in a match at Richmond, Va., last fall, but the betting to-day was $100 to $85 in favor of Bogardus.

The Ways and Means Committee of the School Board met last evening to consider the report of the secretary on appropriations for the ensuing year. After deducting the total expenditures of $187,350 from the appropriation of 1881, the sum of $19,571, is available for the fiscal year of 1881-2. The estimate increases the expenditure from $584,632 15 in 1881 to $594,605 40 in 1882. The collector's bond for $295,000 was approved.

The employes of the Missouri Furnace Company presented Mr. P. A. Gough with a handsome gold-headed cane Thursday evening. Mr. Gough has been the general manager of the offices of the Furnace Company for a number of years till yesterday, when he started for Dry Fork Mines to superintend them for the Furnace Company. The presentation was wholly unexpected and was followed by some appropriate remarks from the recipient and superintendent of the works.

CURIOUS CASES.

Mistakes in Identifying Unknown Bodies at the Morgue.

The Most Ingenious and Puzzling Suicide on Record at the Coroner's Office.

A good logical reason why many intelligent persons take a peculiar delight in gazing at the bloody bodies and putrid corpses in the Morgue for identification is not easily given. Still, that building and the Coroner's office has an inordinate fascination for most people. If the Morgue is interesting, its records certainly are. Yesterday Coroner Frank and Deputy Coroner Praedicow were examining the old records of the office when a POST-DISPATCH reporter happened in. "It is wonderful how many cases of mistaken identity occur in this office," said Coroner Frank. "In the last four months some of the bodies exposed in the exhibition room of the Morgue have been identified as no less than half-a-dozen different individuals. Three weeks ago a man was found at the Soup House one morning in an insensible condition. He was removed to the City Hospital and died the same afternoon. The body was placed on a slab in the Morgue for identification. Three of the regular soup-house boarders viewed the body, which was dressed in a pair of overalls, coat, vest and a pair of rubber shoes, and positively identified the man as a regular boarder of this institution. The proprietor of a boarding house on Fourteenth, near Spruce, visited the Morgue and positively identified the dead man as a cattle trader. He said he was absolutely certain, as he had particularly noticed the man's clothing when he was alive. A German woman obtained a permit to view the body on the inside of the Morgue. As soon as she saw the dead man she burst into tears. She looked closely into the face and exclaimed, "My poor husband! It's my husband!" She gave his name and the identification was made public. A few days later a man walked into Central Station and inquired of Sergeant Sam Brown why he had been published as dead? At the Morgue he met the German woman who was his wife. She did not regret her tears but she admitted that she was mistaken. Her husband had been away from her for two years. The dead man was next identified as a hostler who had been employed at Doyle's Stables, Eleventh and St. Charles streets. All these identifications, however, turned out to be mistakes, and the dead man is now entered on the records as unknown."

"Some years ago" said Mr. Praedicon, "a man named Henry Kaiser, aged 33 years, a shoemaker, who had lived in New Orleans, died at the City Hospital. He was a married man but was separted from his wife. A woman living in New Orleans read an account of the case and came up here. The man had died of cholera, and the body could not be exhumed. A very accurate description was forwarded her with all the facts that he had given before he died, and everything corresponded. Her husband's life had been insured and she was looking after the money. She readily obtained a copy of the burial certificate at the office of the Health Commissioner and had collected all her facts she started for New Orleans. At Memphis a man named Henry Kaner boarded the boat and discovered his wife, who wrote to the Insurance Company that her husband was still alive and she did not want the money as much as she did him. They went to the Crescent City together. Every fact in the case of the man who died at the City Hospital corresponded with the wife's description of Henry Kaner, of New Orleans.

Another case almost as interesting was that of an unknown man. The body was taken to the Morgue and when stripped was found to be completely tatooed from the neck to the knees. The description was that the body was tatooed in figures of ships, anchor and coil, flag, etc. This was published and the following day a boarding house keeper called and identified him and brought a friend later to make certain. The friend said it was not the man they were looking for. Two men boarding at the St. Louis house, in Carondelet, viewed the body, and were positive that the dead man was an old mariner. A third friend asked if there was a star on each shoulder? On examination it was found that there was one in front of each shoulder, but none on the apex such as described. He said it was not the man that the others supposed he was. Mr. O'Hara, of the Island, East St. Louis, positively identified the body as that of an old seaman and acquaintance. Two days later he called again and reported that the man whom he identified at the Morgue had turned up. The body was consigned to potters' field and registered in the records as unknown.

In the Coroner's office there is a record of the suicide of a man, who probable shuffled off the mortal coil in a more ingenious way than was ever before followed. The verdict was that the man committed suicide by taking poison, shooting, hanging and drowning himself. The body was discovered in the River des Peres near the Weber road. It was suspended from a tree branch by a rope, and was a foot under water. A skiff floated a few feet from the spot, and in it were found an ounce bottle that had contained laudanum and the cork. In the bottom of the skiff was a revolver, one chamber of which was empty. When the body was taken out of the water the neck was broken and a large bullet wound penetrated the right temple. The man had tied the noose with regard to the water so that when stretched at full length it would allow the body to go a foot under water. He then placed his head in the noose, took the revolver in one hand, the laudanum in the other, and stood on the seat of the skiff. As he drank down the laudanum he fired the revolver and fell five feet in the water, when his neck was broken and the man was drowned.

A Petty Street Car Imposition.

Some of the cars on the Market Street Line were run by a peculiar schedule last night and the result was a petty swindle in the way of collecting double fares. Cars were kept waiting at Nineteenth and Market. When one came in from the west it had to take its turn waiting. If the passengers went forward to the car about to leave for the down town terminus they were charged an extra fare. In one case the passengers who had already paid one set of fares were pointed out to conductor wearing bell-punch 36, who was on car No. 55. Although thus informed by the conductor behind that these people had paid, No. 36 insisted on collecting again, and when quietly remonstrated with, very coarsely and loudly told them they had no business to make the change of cars; that he wasn't going to take another conductor's passengers through.

THE LEADING EXTERNAL SPECIFIC FOR

SKIN DISEASES

A Beautifier of the Complexion.

It renders the Cuticle Healthful, Clear, and Smooth, and is the best possible substitute for expensive Sulphur Baths. It will heal Ulcers and Sores.

Persons employing it have no need to resort to Sulphur Springs for bathing purposes.

It is a desirable DISINFECTANT of CLOTHING or BED LINEN, and a capital remedy and preventive of Obnoxious or Contagious Diseases. It is also valuable as an injection.

As an adjunct of the TOILET, it is far more desirable than any cosmetics.

TAN, FRECKLES, PIMPLES, and BLOTCHES yield to its influence; and it is the very best soap to shave with, leaving the skin smooth. It also ERADICATES DANDRUFF. The article is endorsed by the Medical fraternity.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE,

IN PARTITION.

In pursuance of a renewed order of the Circuit Court, within and for the city of St. Louis, made on March 15, 1881, in a certain cause then pending in said court, wherein John G. Priest, assignee of John J. Murdock, and Murdock & Dickson is plaintiff, and James B. Eads and Barton Bates, trustees under the will of Charles K. Dickson, deceased, et al., are defendants, being case numbered 46,263, the undersigned, heretofore appointed special commissioner in said case, was directed to make a resale of the property described in said order as a lot or strip of ground lying and being in the city of St. Louis, State of Missouri, to-wit: A lot of ground situate in city block No. 205, being a part of lot No. 18, according to the amended plat of Chariess addition, containing a front of ten feet on the east line of Eleventh street, by a depth eastwardly of one hundred and fifty-two feet six inches (152 feet 6 inches), bounded north by the south line of Walnut street, as established by ordinance No. 10645, and southwardly by a line distant northwardly ten feet from and parallel to the south line of said lot No. 18, westwardly by the east line of Eleventh street and eastwardly by an alley, a plat of which said strip of ground is filed with the amended petition in said case, and marked "Exhibit A." Now, therefore, under and by virtue of said above mentioned order of court, I will, on at the eastern front door of the Court House, in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, between the hours of 9 o'clock a. m. and 5 o'clock p. m. of said day, offer for sale, at public vendue, the above parcel of land, to the highest bidder, for cash.

FRIDAY, THE 20TH OF MAY, A. D. 1881,

NORTH ST. LOUIS LOCALS.

On Monday a new time table will go into effect on the Benton-Bellefontaine railroad to meet the demand of the twelve hour runs.

A force of men started to work this morning building a large new gas receiver for the Laclede Iron Works, Second and Ferry streets.

Mr. Samuel B. Stannard, well and prominently known, has become identified with the Knapp, Stout & Co. Company as general superintendent.

Mr. C. Rush has been appointed Superintendent of the Fifth Street Railroad Company, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Capt. Fuqua yesterday.

Mr. Philip Gruner, Jr., President of the Gruner Brothers' Lumber Company, returned to-day from the lumber districts of Wisconsin, where he purchased 3,000,000 feet of lumber, to be run here in rafts this season.

Early this morning Alexander Peper, six years of age, residing at No. 923 Cass avenue, was severely bitten in the right leg by a dog owned by Miss Rosia Bley, No. 1516 North Tenth street. The lady declined to have her pet dog slain.

This morning the following named teamsters were arrested for running wagons without license. All of the men are from Illinois: Dan Sullivan, Milton Holyshaw, George Chapman, Charles Larimie, Frank White, Mike McKenzie and John Raftery.

MR. JOHN S. BRIGGS, a well known citizen of Omaha, Neb., was terribly afflicted with an acute attack of rheumatism in his back. The disease, which had been preying upon him for years, had drawn him out of shape. He had resorted to every remedy known to physicians, but found no relief until he tried St. Jacobs Oil, one bottle of which effected a complete and radical cure.

Southern Ball Toilets.

The coming ball at the Southern is creating quite a sensation among the ladies. There will be many elaborate toilets displayed that night. The madames and misses are all busy now selecting and arranging their costumes. These toilets can be made attractive in no way so surely as by leaving their floral adornment to the well known Mme. Jacquemin, manufacturer and importer of flowers, plumes, etc., at 306 North Fifth. The work of this establishment, as is well known to the ladies of the city, is unsurpassed in St. Louis.

CLOCKS at cost at Cooper's, 209 North Fifth street.

The Fischer Estate.

SHOOTING NOTES.

Complete List of Prizes for the Approaching Tournament.

On Monday next at 4 p. m. the annual meeting of the St. Louis Gun Club takes place at Armory Hall. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year, and important business transacted in regard to the meeting of the State Sportsmen's Association during the latter part of May. A team will also be selected to represent the club in the State team shoot.

The tournament in connection with the Missouri State Sportsmen's Association is now all the topic with handlers of the gun. It will begin May 23 and close May 28. Clubs will participate from all over the country. The meetings will be held at the Southern Hotel at night. The shooting each day will begin at 8:30 a. m. and last till dark at the Compton Avenue Ball Park. In addition to the purses which will be shot for, and which will run from $200 to $400 on each event, a great number of special prizes have been donated by St. Louis merchant. The aggregate value of these special prizes, which were all solicited by Mr. Will Nave, is over $2,000. The following is a complete

DIAMONDS.

Prospective High Prices and their Safety as an Investment.

Anticipating the rise which has already taken place in the value of diamonds and other precious stones, and the certainty, almost, that they will continue to advance, we purchased a very large stock, at much lower prices than the same goods command at the present time. This enables us to offer unusual advantages or guarantees, which we submit below:

1. Having a much larger stock than we would ordinarily carry, we will sell at a close margin.

2. If for any reason a purchaser desires to exchange after having made the purchase, we will cheerfully accord it without reduction in price, provided it is done without delay.

3. If for any reason a purchaser desires to return the goods, or to realize cash from the investment, a special arrangement may be made at the time of purchase to do so, at a reduction of 10 per cent and the cost of setting, at any time within six months from the date of purchase.

Guarantees of this nature from a responsible firm makes the purchase of diamonds a pretty secure investment. Very respectfully,

E. JACCARD JEWELRY CO.,
Fifth and Olive streets.

THE S. S. and R. Jean Drawers are not only the best made, but perfect in fit; price, $1. Ask for them. GOLDEN EAGLE.

A Talkative Neighbor.

A suit for slander was filed to-day in the Circuit Court by Frederick Hoberg, a carpenter, residing at 1707 North Twelfth street, against Henry and Ellen Nan, neighbors, residing at No. 1704 on the same street. The carpenter and the defendant, Nan, who is a dealer in wood, had a falling out which resulted in some very hard things being said, and the neighbors became eager listeners. Mr. Hoberg alleges that Mrs. Ellen Nan on Wednesday last maliciously and slanderously stated to several people that Hoberg was the father of some of the children of his son's young wife, and that he shared the couch of the young couple. It is further charged that Mrs. Nan stated in the presence of a crowd that Hoberg had starved a child to death. $1,000 damages are asked by reason of the injurious utterances complained of and the husband is called upon to answer in Court for the wife's nimble tongue-wagging.

JOSEPH H. DEPREZ & CO., originators of $5 pants to order, removed to 914½ Olive street.

New Buildings.

Mr. Barrett will spend $100 in making alterations on his office, northwest corner Third and Pine streets.

On Geyer avenue, between Ninth and Tenth, Mr. Knollenback is to have a two-story four-room dwelling, to cost $1,000.

Mr. E. Reno is to have four two-story twenty-four-room dwellings, to cost $4,000, on Columbus, between Dorcas and Harpen streets.

Mr. A. Schulte to-day closed contracts for the erection of a three-story twenty-four room dwelling, to cost $5,800, on Exchange street, between Ninth and Tenth streets.

WILL OPEN next MONDAY,

with a fine array of LAMPS.

Ice Cream.

L. Mohr, corner Fifteenth and Chouteau avenue, is now prepared to supply family and pic-nic parties with the very best ice cream, in any quantity or flavors, on short notice. I have also fitted up a beautiful garden next to my store. Fresh Vienna bread, constantly on hand and served to grocers only, fresh twice a day.

The Columbia Assets.

In the Columbia Life Insurance Company litigation Judge Thayer this morning granted leave to the receiver to sell the Miller farm, located in Jefferson county. This is a piece of property bought by John A. Sturgis for $1,700.

West Point Cadetship.

The examination of applicants for appointment from the Second Congressional District occurred at the Central High School building to-day. At 10 o'clock the following candidates presented themselves: George Dickson, 1506 Gratriot street; Samuel Reber, 716 Garrison avenue; Alex P. Robinson, 2731 Chestnut street; Arthur C. Backof, 928 North Eighteenth street, and Charles H. Allen, 2618 Locust street, all of this city; Robert E. Winter, Tower Grove, Mo., and Thomas M. Young, Stratman, St. Louis county, Mo. As to age the applicants range from sixteen to twenty-one, Sam Reber being the youngest and Charles H. Allen the oldest.

The following gentlemen constitute the Examining Board: Hon. Thomas Allen, Col. T. T. Gantt, Prof. C. M. Woodard and H. H. Morgan. The branches in which the candidates must pass are reading, orthography, arithmetic, English grammar, geography, U. S. history and the Constitution. With the exception of orthography five questions on each branch constituted the written examination, and this was followed by an oral examination. The test in orthography consisted of writing and punctuating two brief selections, dictated by one of the examiners. The present examination is to be followed by a physical examination before the appointment is made.

Each of the young men has assumed a nom de plume which appears on his examination papers instead of the real name of the applicant. The successful candidate will be required to pass another examination at West Point in July, 1882, on entering the Military Academy. An alternate candidate will not be appointed now, as is the custom in some States, but the examination papers will be filed away for the use of the board should another selection be found necessary.

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS.

Over $80,000 Invested in New Buildings During the Week.

The Chief of the Fire Department issued permits for new buildings this week to cost $82,930 or $80,875 for the brick buildings and $2,055 for the frames. Aside from that there were also permits issued for alterations on buildings to cost $1,000; for additions, $6700 and for repairs, $675.

Of the brick buildings, twelve are of two stories, six of three stories, eight of one story, and one of four stories—all with a total of 161 rooms. Among the buildings, fifteen will be dwellings, three kitchens, one foundry, one savings bank building, two storage rooms, and one boiler room.

Of the frame buildings six will be of one-story, one of one and a half stories and two of two-stories, with a total of twenty-one rooms. Four will be for dwellings, three for stables, two kitchens and one slaughter house.

Since the 1st of January permits have been issued for new buildings to cost $1,844,485. The largest permit issued during the week was for a three-story stone front thirty-two room dwelling to cost $16,500.

Orders of Publication.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Edward J. Gay
vs.
Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer and Albert L. Aubin.

Before John M. Young, Justice of the Peace for the Fifth District, composed of the First and Seventeenth Wards of the City of St. Louis, Mo. The constable having returned that Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer, defendants in the above entitled suit, are not found, on motion of plaintiff by his attorney, it is ordered by the justice that said defendants, Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer, be notified that a civil action of unlawful detainer has been commenced against them and the other defendants (subtenants under Auguste Fischer), the object and general nature of which is to obtain possession of all that certain parcel of ground described as a lot of ground in block 105 of the City of St. Louis, having a front of one hundred and fourteen 54-100 feet on Fourth street by a depth of one hundred and thirty-five feet, being the northwest corner of Fourth and Myrtle streets, in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, together with judgment for 330 33-100 dollars back rent and $166 66 per month from 15th April, 1881, as damages for unlawfully withholding said premises; being the same property formerly leased to Auguste Fischer by said plaintiff; and unless they appear before me on Saturday, the 14th day of May, 1881, at the hour of 7 o'clock a. m. (three hours grace given), and show cause why judgment for possession, rent and damages should not be rendered against them, the same will be so rendered.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a daily newspaper published within the City of St. Louis, Missouri.

A true copy from the record.

Witness my hand, this 2d day of May, 1881.

JOHN M. YOUNG,
Justice of the Peace, Fifth District, City of St. Louis, State of Missouri.
St. Louis, Mo., May 2, 1881. 12T

ASSIGNEE'S NOTICE—Notice is hereby given to the creditors of Alexander B. Walsh that on Monday, the 20th day of June, A. D. 1881, or as soon thereafter as counsel can be heard, I shall apply to the Circuit Court, City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, for a discharge from my trust as assignee of said Alexander B. RUPTURE CURED!

Over 300 Cases.

During the last five months 300 patients received treatment at the Vienna Institute for the cure of Hernia, 1113 Washington avenue, this city. Of this number 262 are now cured. Thirty-eight extreme cases will be cured in a few months.

When it is remembered that in the above is represented every variety of Ruptures and ages, from mere infants to the advanced age of 80 years, and Ruptures of a few months to those of 45 years' standing, some idea of the success we have attained in the treatment of this affliction may be realized. We have in every case given our patients a written guarantee or contract to cure them in a specified time or return the fee paid. In each and every case the patients were cured before the expiration of the allotted time.

Should any of our patients find this statement incorrect, they are at liberty to make it known at our expense through the columns of this paper.

The Vienna Institute is permanently established in this city. Our method of treating Hernia or Rupture is based upon scientific and rational principles, which any person of intelligence can comprehend. It is not a surgical operation. The mechanic or laborer can continue his occupation while under treatment.

Those that desire to be cured should avail themselves of the winter season, as Rupture is more readily cured in cold than hot weather.

Persons from the country can receive treatment and return same day.

For information address

F. T. SMYTHE, M. D.,
President.

THE SECRET ORDERS.

Work Done by the Local Lodges During the Week.

An Interesting Budget of News for Members of All Fraternities.

The current week has not been overly active among the mystic fraternities of this city, yet considerable work has been done by the lodges, and the number of applications fully equal any week during the year of 1881.

The Mason's Compass.

Lebanon, Ky., reports the formation of a new commandery of the Knights Templar.

Work for the future meetings is reported by nearly all of the local and State lodges.

The E. A. degree was the interesting work of Missouri Lodge, No. 1, on Thursday night.

The third degree was the work of Keystone Lodge, 243, at its meeting on Wednesday night.

No work of public importance is reported by Itaska Lodge No. 42, at the meeting on Tuesday night.

At a special session of Beacon Lodge, No. 3, held on Wednesday night, the ceremonies of the third were conferred.

The Knights Templar during the year have granted dispensations for three new commanderies in this State.

The officers of the Relief Board will hold a business session at the Masonic Temple, Seventh and Market streets.

Mount Olive Lodge, No. 316, of Mexico, was represented this week here by its Worshipful Master, Charles S. Parker.

The interesting ceremonies of the degree of Mark was confered by Bellefontaine R. A. Chapter, No. 25, Wednesday night.

The various city commanderies of the Knights Templar are making extensive arrangements to celebrate Ascension Day.

The second degree of Masonry was the interesting ceremony gone through with by West Gate Lodge on last Tuesday night.

Police Sergeant George Pierce, Master of Napthalia Lodge, No. 25, at the next meeting of the lodge Thursday night, will confer the degrees.

The beautiful and impressive ceremonies of the Temple degree will be worked by St. Aldemar Commandry, No. 18, Knights Templar, at its next meeting.

Full particulars have already appeared in the POST-DISPATCH of the annual sessions of the State Commandery of Knights Templar and Grand Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons which have been held in the city during the week.

Wednesday night a lodge of instruction was held at Kirkwood by the District Deputy of the Sixteenth Masonic District, A. C. Steirant. The work was of a most interesting character and was attended by a number of Masons from the city lodges.

The Three Links.

Next Tuesday night Laclede Lodge, No. 22, will have an election for a new Secretary.

The lodges of this city, and in fact all over the State, report having candidates ready for the degrees.

On Tuesday, 17th inst., the Odd-Fellows' Grand Lodge of Missouri will begin its annual session in this city.

Last Monday night the Odd-Fellows' Mutual Aid Society of St. Louis took a large number of new applicants.

Application has been received from the southern part of Arkansas for authority to organize a new German lodge.

The Odd Fellows' Library has a new addition to its membership this time, all of the members of the Laclede Lodge going in.

Some time next month a lodge of colored Odd-Fellows' will be instituted in East St. Louis, being the first in the Sucker State.

Last Tuesday morning at Cleveland, O., the Grand Encampment of Ohio began its annual session with a full representation of delegates in attendance.

The Odd Fellows' Library Hall, Fourth and Locust streets, his been thoroughly cleaned and renovated during the week and presents a neat appearance.

The Odd Fellows Library of this city has recently increased its already extensive collection of reading matter with several volumes of new literary works.

Knights of Honor.

The probable advance in members this month will be more than any during the current year.

The probabilities at this date are favorable to the re-election of Judge Hoke, of Louisville, Ky., as the Supreme Dictator.

Last Tuesday night Oak Lodge, No. 100, held an entertaining meeting and worked the degree of initiation on four candidates.

Daniel Miller, late deceased knight of Laclede Lodge, K. of H., was laid to rest on Tuesday afternoon last by the members and officers of that lodge.

The names of several applicants are now under consideration by the officials of Barton Lodge, No. 1422. It is probable that this lodge will work at the next meeting.

Several applications for membership are now pending in Olive Branch Lodge, No. 812, but cannot be passed upon from the fact that the physician of the lodge is not in the city.

The assessment call for the month of April shows 58 deaths, the payment of the same being due on the 1st proximo. The contributing members will have less than two cents to pay on each death.

Next Tuesday morning the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Honor will begin its twelfth annual session at Minneapolis, Minn. The representatives from this State have already left. Hon. Joseph Branch, P. G. D., will represent the interests of the Missouri lodges at the Supreme Lodge session.

A. O. U. W.

The payment in full of the quota is promised by the State Grand Lodge officials.

During this week Mr. H. S. Baker, representing Lodge No. 176, at Danville, Va., was in the city.

$1,808 is reported as the full amount thus far sent in for the benefit of the founder of the order, Mr. Upchurch, of Springfield, Mo.

To-night the members of Globe Lodge, No. 54, anticipate an interesting meeting, as several candidates will come forward for initiation.

The monthly report of Dr. W. L. Richardson, Grand Recorder of State, was issued today, and shows a membership of nearly 7,000 in the State.

At last after application the Grand Lodge of Kansas has been set aside as a separate beneficiary section, with the same official authority as that of the State Grand Lodge of Missouri.

To-day the Overseer made its appearance for May. This journal is now recognized all over America as the leading exponent of the Order's interests. Mr. F. W. Bacon, the well known legal adviser, is its editor.

Pythian Knights.

Last Thursday night Damon Lodge, No. 28, had an interesting meeting and worked in the degrees.

The latest lodge of the order is reported at Caseyville, O., with seventy-four charter members.

Next month will be quite lively in the lodges throughout the State, as the representatives are then to be elected to the session of the State Grand Lodge.

THE BANNER LODGE

is the title just bestowed upon Golden Crown Lodge No. 62, Tuesday evening last. Twelve candidates were taken in the second rank, and the same number will be put through the third rank next Tuesday night. During the evening Col. John McEachirn, Chancellor Commander of the Golden Crown, was the recipient of a splendid and costly gold Pythian watch charm, which was presented by Mr. Bruce, Keeper of Records and Seal, in behalf of the lodge. Visiting Pythians are fraternally invited during their stay in the city to visit the parlors of Golden Crown, Eleventh and Franklin avenue, which will be found the handsomest in the West.

Independent Foresters.

Cards are on file in nearly all of the city courts asking for membership.

The probable advance in the membership at St. Louis this month will be about seventy-five.

The Supreme Chief Ranger, E. Klauber, from Louisville, Ky., will be in the city on Tuesday.

The State High Chief Ranger, S. Herman Thomas, got back on Tuesday from a tour of Colorado.

One hundred and one contributing members is claimed as the membership of Mound City Court.

No further statement of the Supreme Treasurer will be given out until next month at the meeting of the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Treasury now reports $500 on hand, every endowment paid, which speaks high praise for the now managing officers of the popular young order.

At its ensuing meeting the boss court of the city, Excelsior, No. 3, will have an interesting time as Col. Edwin S. Pike, P. S. C. R., is expected to attend, and the degree of initiation will be conferred.

At the Masonic Hall, this city, next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, the Missouri High Court will commence its annual session. The only work of special interest will be the nomination and election of officers.

Legion of Honor.

Several of the Council meetings have this week been visited by the Supreme Chancellor, Maj. C. M. Whitney.

Stock in the proposed Temple is being taken very rapidly, the full amount subscribed for up to date being $10,000.

Recently a dispensation was asked for the founding of a new Council, but up to this time no definite action has been taken on the subject.

Thursday night there was a large attendance at the session of Kirkwood Council, and some four candidates were put through the degree of initiation.

Tuesday evening next at 8 o'clock an adjourned session of the Supreme Council of the order will be he held at the Lindell Hotel, Room 22. The principal object of the meeting is to conclude the work incident to making a revision of the Legion's general constitution.

Alpha Council, No. 1, on Thursday night held an interesting session and worked in the initiatory degree. A committee of this council is arranging a programme for the celebration of the second anniversary, which occurs at Pickwick Theater, on the evening of the 19th.

Temple of Honor.

The temples of the order in this city are reported as progressing very rapidly and all temples have applications now pending.

Franklin Temple, No. 3, will give a fine musical entertainment on Monday evening at the hall, Thirteenth and Olive streets. On that day the temple will have attained its sixth anniversary.

Knights of the Golden Rule.

The Supreme Commandery meets at Cincinnati, O., in August and it is expected by that time that there will be fully 20,000 active members in the order. The last report shows seventy-six castles and a large membership. Since the institution of the organization but two deaths have been reported.

Key Hole Whisperings.

Valley Council, Royal Arcanum, at its next session will confer the initiatory degree.

The A. O. U. W. in Missouri claim 200 lodges and the Knights of Honor nearly 100.

Philadelphia, Pa., is the latest city to report the founding of a new lodge of the A. L. of H.

Several new lodges of the Good Templars are reported to be organizing in New York State.

The local lodges of the National American Association report a continued growth in membership.

The total amount of stock already taken in the proposed temple of the Legion of Honor is over $16,000.

At the next session of Valley Council, R. A., the initiatory degree will be conferred on thirteen applicants.

On Saturday, June 25, in this city, the Grand Chapter of the C. of T. and W. will begin its annual conclave.

Last Monday night the monthly meeting of the Druids' Benefit Society was held and several new candidates taken in.

The Grand Chapter of State of the Chapter of Temperance and Wisdom will open its annual meeting in this city on the 25th prox.

The Knights of Hope have arranged a splendid programme for the celebration of their fourth anniversary on Monday night at Stolle's Hall.

St. Patrick's Church was attended during high mass last Sunday morning by the officials and members of No. 7 Division of the A. O. H.

At this time there are no less than four lodges of the Iron Hall forming in St. Louis—two of them at Druids' Hall and two in the northern part of the city.

The order of The Free Sons of Israel will begin its twentieth annual conclave at Philadelphia, Pa., on Tuesday. The delegates from here have already gone.

The former secret society reporter of the Globe-Democrat, Winfield S. Eddy, is expected here next week from New York State, where he has been for a year or more.

To-morrow evening week the members of Lafayette Association, No. 15, N. A. A., will give a musical and literary entertainment and hop at the hall, Thirteenth and Olive streets.

Mt. Vernon Band of Hope last Sunday evening gave a grand musical and literary entertainment at the First Congregational Church in honor of the twenty-sixth anniversary of the order.

On next Thursday night the Knights' Star, a prominent colored order, will give a musical and literary entertainment at Stolle's Hall, Fourteenth and Biddle streets, in honor of its thirteenth anniversary.

The annual session of the Grand Division of America, of the A. O. H., will begin Tuesday at noon at St. Patrick's Hall, Seventh and Biddle streets. Three hundred delegates will attend and the session will last three days.

Several of the most influential advocates of this city are now forming a temperance benefit order. A meeting will be held at St. Patrick's Hall, Seventh and Biddle streets tomorrow at 2 p. m., to further consider the matter.

A membership of over 8,000 is now reported by the Chosen Friends, with only five deaths since its institution. The order in this city is gaining very rapidly, there being already two councils and prospects encouraging for two more.

On Monday morning, May 16, the annual session of the Worthy Grand Lodge of Missouri of the A. P. A. will meet in St. Louis at Fourteenth and Franklin avenue. The session will last two days and will be represented by thirty-six delegates.

PANSIES.

I send the pansies while the year is young,
  Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;
Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung
  By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;
And if in recollection lives regret
  For wasted days and dreams that were no true,
I tell thee that the "pansy freak'd with jet"
  Is still the heart's-ease that poets knew.
Take all the sweetness of a gift unsought,
  And for the pansies send me back a thought.

—[SARAH DOUDNEY.

AMUSEMENTS.

Rial's Humpty Dumpty and Novelty Company at Pope's.

Snelbaker's Majestics at the Olympic—Musical and Dramatic Notes.

During the present week the Olympic has been crowded nightly by the lovers of burnt cork minstrelsy to listen to Haverly's European Mastodons. At Pope's Seeman, Emperor of Magicians, has done a fair business. The Mastodon's conclude their engagement at the Olympic to-morrow Sunday (evening.)

POPE'S.

At Pope's Theater on Sunday Jay Rial's Mammoth Humpty-Dumpty and Ravel Pantomine Troupe and Leonard Grover's, Jr's, Trans-Atlantic Novelty Combination begins a week's engagement at popular prices. This gigantic organization embraces the great London Dog Circus. Several noted specialty artists are included in this monster aggregation.

THE OLYMPIC.

On Monday Snelbaker's Majestic Consolidation, over half a hundred strong, begins a return engagement at the Olympic. This organizacion is the only one in existence presenting two, three and four separate and distinct acts at one time. In addition to all the noted specialty stars four genuine Hindoo Nautch girls have been added to the company. Besides the various specialty acts, songs, dances, athletics, etc., a new burlesque entitled, "Prince Pretty Pat," will be produced. The Majestics form one of the most talented specialty companies in the country.

NOTES.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers stars next season, it is said, under the management of A.M. Palmer.

The Feuilleton says Steele Mackaye has invented an usher who will disappear whenever you touch him.

The wife of David James, manager and comedian of the Vaudeville Theater, London, died lately at the age of 38.

C. A. Stevenson is ill at Denver and unable to accompany his wife, Kate Claxton, and her company to the Pacific coast.

It is not unlikely that Mr. John A. Mackey of Rice's Surprise Party will star next season in a new play by a well-known author.

Francois Coppee's new play, "Mme. de Maintenon," produced at the Paris Odeon on April 12, was applauded with enthusiasm on the first night, but does not promise to be a durable success.

Mr. Louis Aldrich will pass the summer either at Revere Beach (where he is interested in the new Improvement Company) or among the White Mountains. His "Partner" Mr. Parsloe, thinks of making a trip to Europe.

A letter from the maestro Strauss to Mr. Rudolph Aronson, of New York, dated Vienna, April 6, announces that illness will prevent his visiting America this summer, and that his journey is postponed until the spring of 1882.

Miss Marie Van, the young American prima donna, who achieved such a great success in her debut in Rome, has just completed her second engagement in the difficult and exacting theatre of Bari, where she is credited with having obtained the most complete success.

King Ludwig, of Bavaria, has promised the Bayreuth Patronage Association the services of the orchestra and chorus of the Theatre Royal, Munich, for two months every year, commencing with 1882, at the annual festival performances to be held in hat town.

Miss Adah Richmond will probably star next season in comic opera. Her agent, now in Paris, has purchased the manuscript of three new comic operas, which she will produce for the first time in this country next season. Miss Richmond is now looking about for a first-class company for her support.

Miss Genevieve Ward will return from her trip to Europe in season to reappear as Stephanie in "Forget-Me-Not" on Sept. 26, when she will begin a four weeks' engagement in the Union Square Theater. She may also act next season in a new play written for her by Lewis Wingfield, and she has under consideration a drama by Mrs. Julius L. Lange (Marie Courcelles).

Bartley Campbell will sail for England on the 25th inst. He is writing two new plays. One deals with Russia life. A Nihilist conspiracy is made the pretext for the arrest of an innocent man. The other deals with Southern life. It is laid at a period before the rebellion, and treats the slave question more from a social than a political aspect. Mr. Campbell's "Galley Slave" will be played at the Court Theater, London, after Mme. Modjeska's engagement is conclued.

Col. Haverly's new theater in Chicago will be an established fact in the early autumn. The site will be nearly opposite his present theatre on Monroe street, and the structure will be erected by the Hannibal and St. Joseph Railroad Company, the offices of which will be located in it. He has re-leased his old theater and will run it until the new one is completed. The new house will be modelled, so far as the auditorium and stage are concerned, upon the general plan of the Boston Theater. Mr. Mann of Boston is the architect.

Manager Abbey was in Boston for a brief period last week, taking a farewell look at the Park Theater preparatory to sailing for Europe. It is rumored that he will endeavor to arrange for an American tour of Adelina Patti in concert and opera, and Christine Nilssonin concert, and that he also has in view an engagement of Mme. Modjeska in this country. It is likewise reported that he will make an effort to engage Henry Irving and Edwin Booth for a joint starring tour on this side the water. Mr. Abbey, however, says he is not going abroad on business, but simply for rest and recreation. Among his enterprises next season are the American tour of the Hanlon-Lees and a sixteen weeks' engagement of Dion Boucicault, who contracts to produce two new Irish plays under his management.

Carl Schurz and His Future.

G. A. Townsend in Cincinnati Enquirer.

A prominent man in both finance and legislation said to me in the cars: "I see you have been guessing at Carl Schurz's occupation in New York. First you had him down to be editor of the Evening Post; next to be employed in a railroad or other position by Henry Villard and fraternity. They were two close guesses," said this gentleman, "because I happen to know what he is going to do. He is to become the editor of the Evening Post, as you originally related, but Villard and Horace White are going to buy the leading interest in the Post and put Schurz there to edit it."

"Well," said I, "I knew they were to be his patrons, but could not quite understand what they could put him in except a railroad."

"It is not a railroad directly," explained my informant, "but it is a newspaper. The Bryant and Godwin interest in the Evening Post is to be sold. The proprietors of the paper do not agree. The Henderson interest owns the building and some of the stock. Henderson's son-in-law, or understrapper, one Sperry, edits the concern, and the Bryant interest doth continually stand upon its head and howl 'Thanatopsis,' because the moral sentiments and the ducats are neither up to their poetical expectation. The interest of Miss Bryant and Mrs. Godwin are to be purchased by Villard, White & Co., and they, having large material concerns, and both being experienced journalists, have hit upon Schurz as a proper editor. The same interest was offered to Charles Nordhoff, and perhaps others, but they declined to buy, although the purchase money was no great sum."

"Has not the paper a large business?"

"No; it contains a great deal of advertising, for which it gets a small rate, and circulates not over ten to twelve thousand daily. If the good times keep up four or five years, and the news department of the Post is made original, and replaces its plethora of opinions, it might get good advertising rates, which it cannot do while Bennett's Telegram beats it every day in giving the news. It must have a circulation corresponding with its advertising rates. Now, Schurz had to do something and this opportunity offered. He did not want to take his family to St. Louis, but he is pretty old at fifty to lift an old heavy paper like that into prosperity. It will be hard labor. The Henderson interest holds the Post building."

THE TABLE.

Retail Rates of All Supplies That Cheer the Inner Man.

Butter—The demand has fallen off some since last week, but figures rule the same with the exception of the best Elgin creamery, which is retailing at 35 instead of 40 cents per pound. Country roll butter goes from 20 to 25 cents per pound and dairy from 25 to 35 cents.

For eggs the demand continues fair, with figures at —— per dozen, and cheese still continues to show a good demand and with quotations at from 8 to 14½ cents per pound.

Fresh Meats—The dealers at all of the principal market centers in the city report a constantly increasing demand, with beef selling at from 12½ to 17 cents per pound; mutton at 10½ cents; sausage at 10 cents, all kinds; pork still goes at 10 cents, and dressed lambs retail at $4 each.

Game and oysters continue without any change worthy of mention, figures ruling as reported last week. Strawberries are dull and selling at 35 cents per quart.

Vegetables—Vegetables are beginning to sell more rapidly and prices show a slight decline; sweet potatoes 25 to 40 cents per peck; Irish potatoes 30 to 40 cents; carrots 25 cents; parsnips 25 cents; apples 25 to 50 cents, and supply light; cucumbers two for 25 cents; new beets 25 cents per dozen; new cabbage $3 per dozen; green peas 50 cents per peck; string beans $1 25 per peck.

Fresh Fish—There is a strong inquiry for river fish, but very few are coming in or can be caught owing to the high stage of the water. Other varieties of fish have only a fair rate and the scale of quotations run from 8c to 12½c and 15c per pound for the very best.

LOCAL SPORTING NOTES.

Business at Mussey's Parlor and Monarch Hall has been excellent, considering the season of the year, but the warm weather has a tendency to reduce the amount of playing. The other rooms are doing fairly.

Tom Gallagher is expected to return on Monday, but owing to the engagements of both himself and Mr. Benedict it is not likely that there will be any games between them in the near future.

Nothing has been heard from Schaefer and Heiser for several days, at which time they were in Philadelphia.

Sam Baldwin is playing some very good games. A couple of days since he played a game of fifty points or no count, during which he made runs of forty-two and two of forty-eight each, but finally he made his fifty points and won.

At Monarch Hall Harry Baldwin is playing twelve balls or no count with the majority of the amateur 15-ball pool players who frequent that popular resort. A few days ago he barred the side pockets and beat Blitz, the Kansas Kid.

John B. Larcari, for several months past an attache of Mr. Mussey's parlor, has been engaged to take charge of the new Southern Hotel billiard room; it is not expected, however, that the tables will be in readiness until Thursday next, so as not to interfere with the promenaders at the grand opening of the hotel. Larcari is a fine young gentleman and thoroughly understands his business.

The St. Louis Browns vs. the Red Stockings will play a game of base ball at the Compton Avenue Park, beginning at 3 o'clock, Sunday afternoon. Rare sport is anticipated.

An excellent game of cricket will take place at the Grand Avenue Park on Sunday, the wickets being pitched at 11 o'clock a. m. The contestants will be the Victoria and St. Louis clubs.

THE LEXINGTON RACES.

The Lexington, (Ky.) races began to-day and will continue up to and including Friday next. The following are the races and purses:

Second Day. First Race—A sweepstakes for three-year olds which have never won a race prior to Jan. 1, 1881; closed with 27 nominations.

Second Race—A sweepstakes for all ages, one and a quarter miles; closed with 18 nominations.

Third Race—The colt stakes for two-year olds; closed with 38 nominations.

Third Day. First Race—Purse $200, for all ages; one and one-eighth miles.

Second Race—A selling sweepstakes, for all ages; one and one-half miles; 6 nominations.

Third Race—Purse $300, for all ages, mile heats.

Fourth Day. First Race—Purse $150, for all ages; one mile.

Second Race—The Ashland Oaks, a sweepstakes for three-year old fillies; one and one-half miles; 23 nominations.

Third Race—Purse $200, for all ages, one and one-quarter miles.

Fifth Day. First Race—The colt and filly stakes for two-year olds, three-quarters of a mile; 39 nominations.

Second Race—The Blue Ribbon, a sweepstakes for three-year olds, mile and a half; 27 nominations.

Third Race—Purse $250, for all ages; mile heats.

Sixth Day—First race—Purse $225, for all ages; maiden allowances; mile and a half.

Second Race—Purse $125 for 2-year olds, winners excluded: $100 to first, $25 to second; half mile.

Third Race—Consolation purse, $250, mile heats for beaten horses.

Some of the finest horses in the land have been entered for the Lexington races and sport bids fair to be of the first order of merit.

The business at Roche's Turf Exchange during the past week has been immense, large crowds thronging that cool and pleasant resort. On Thursday the winning combination tickets paid $144 each for an investment of $2. Pools on the Lexington races will be sold every day and evening.

The races at Louisville will begin on Tuesday, May 17, being the next in order after Lexington.

Pool selling at Pate's was quite lively during the past week. Pools and tickets will be sold this week on the Lexington races.

The headquarters of the Jockey Club on South Fifth street, near the new Southern, have been visited by many members during the week. The machinery of the pool-room, under the control of Ecker, Watts & Co., is in operation morning, afternoon and evening. Bulletins are received from the race tracks, and betting men find all the facilities that can be provided.

Carlisle as a Pessimist.

From the London World.

There is nothing more gratifying to human vanity, and there is no more conclusive proof of human littleness, than the pessimistic belief in the immediate advent of the deluge. Carlisle was always anticipating some stupendous cataclysm which was to wreck the world. Like Bunyan, he was forever exhorting us to flee from the City of Destruction. He never helped any man across the Slough of Despond. Men who begin by preaching against the principles of their age usually end by abusing its individuals. Carlyle had no idea whatever of making the best of his generation, and the business of execration embittered and contracted his whole nature. This is one of the very commonest tendencies of life, and it is especially common at the present day. Nothing is so easy as to depreciate and to backbite; nothing is so difficult to resist, as years advance, and one finds out that all is vanity. Carlyle's Reminiscences are called by the Edinburgh reviewer "the autopsy of his mind and heart, published by his desire almost as soon as the earth had covered his remains?" With a sinble exception the description is true.

THE ONE I LOVE.

The one I love is sweet and fair,
The summer sun shines through her hair,
The beauty of her bosom bare
Lends rapture to the balmy air:
  The ringlets on her brow as bright
  The zephyrs fondle with delight.

The flowers and the birds in chase
E'en gayly strive to win her grace;
The winds in blissful breezes race,
And seek a smile from her dear face;
  And, though she seemeth proud and vain,
  I bless her o'er and o'er again.

The charm of her own loving ways
Is blent in idle, human praise;
The grandeur of the sunny rays
But greets the beauty she conveys;
  Of only her I love to sing—
  My darling's little name is Spring.

BOSTON GOSSIP.

The Public Garden—William Warren's Old Stand-by Play.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, May 3.—The May flower woman stands once more at her old post on a down-town corner and new bonnets deck the heads of fair shoppers, from which it may be fairly inferred that spring has really come, without any prevarication or shamming. Another indication that the season of ethereal mildness is with us is the condition of Boston Public Garden. Now, Boston Public Garden is quite a place, although you mayn't know it. Of Boston Common you may have heard. People generally do hear of Boston Common, if they have ever met a Bostonian or seen a Boston newspaper, for we boast long and loudly of our Common, "that green oasis in the heart of the city," as the writers of guide books to the city phrase it.

But of the Public Garden we say little, but think a great deal, and when we get sentimental we go and walk there, meandering round and round the curving paths, remarking upon the beauty of the budding tulips—I never pun—trying to tell beach from birch trees, wondering how it is that the several little arbors and summer houses are always inhabited, criticising the attitudes and self-forgetfulness of various pairs of individuals, and probably getting criticised in turn.

There is a lake in that garden, quite a considerable lake, I assure you, on which are many small boats in which the small fry of the aristocratic neighborhood that bounds the garden learn to row. Dainty little girls handle the oars very nicely, and really, gain a deal of pleasure and profit by this opportunity. Small boys, too, sail boats on this lake and capsize both boats and selves now and then, by way of variety only, for the lake is so very shallow about its margin that it is impossible to get up an excitement by tumbling in. Then the small youth of both sexes ride velocipedes at whizzing speed along the borders of this lake, following the curves with mathematical precision, but bringing a looker-on to the verge of nervousness by steering apparently straight to the depths and only making up their minds at the last instant to remain on dry land. It really isn't comfortable to watch the little mischiefs.

Over that lake there is a bridge—an iron bridge with granite piers and imposing design. They are quite wonderful granite piers, I promise you, well worth study as regards their ornamental and other peculiarities. I have studied them; in fact I may say I know them well, and the bridge, too, from both points of view—above and below. That bridge with its piers is one of the features of Boston.

Once there was no bridge there, though there was something in the nature of a lake—the entire neighborhood being a moisty sort of swamp, occupied until about half a century ago by rope-walks, which being burned, the city voted to make a garden of it; but it took more than thirty years' fight before the spot was safely secured to the public and saved from those who were determined to turn it into streets and building lots.

Every few years, even now, a scheme is gotten up for taking a part or whole of the garden or common and cutting streets through and putting up houses. There are those who look with gnawing envy and covetousness at these breathing spots in the heart of our city and long to steal them from the people.

The garden is a continuation of the common, with only a street to separate them, so that the two in connection afford a really fine walk, although of course far inferior to the pretentious parks of most other large cities. Boston groans a good deal to think she hasn't a grand park yet, and is always promising herself one. But if she hasn't a park, she has the most beautiful suburbs of any city that I ever visited on either side of the Atlantic. For five miles out in any possible direction from Boston, except out to sea, there are broad, well kept roads, with beautiful, stately mansions, fine grounds and grand old shade trees; and there are also long, cool, retired roads, sheltered from the sun by the shady groves through which they run—more lovely drives there are nowhere to be found, or cosier, pleasanter walks, which may be easily reached by our open horse cars.

I went to the Museum the other evening to see a play which is as famous as the Museum itself, but whose fame is identical with that of the Museum cast. I never heard of "The Silver Spoon" as being played anywhere else except at the Museum, and if it is, it ought not to be for it couldn't by any possibility be the same play. I was going to speak of it as "The Member from Cranberry Centre," till I chanced to glance at the programme and remembered that that wasn't the title at all. In reality the play was intended as just a pretty, little old-school comedy, wherein two young people fall in love and marry; there is the usual will by which the young man's father leaves him nothing of his great fortune, but only a silver spoon, until three months afterwards a codicil turns up making him wealthy. But meanwhile he nobly pooh-poohs at the dross, turns up his nose at a wily old lawyer of the conventional stage type who tries to get everybody into a muss, and gets up a false heir and a false will, etc. It is the thinnest kind of a story, but dropped in accidentally, as a set-off for the youthful couple, is a comical old couple, consisting of an old maid who is aunty to the young lady, and an old widower, who comes up to Boston from Cranberry Centre as a representative to the Great and General Court—otherwise the Legislature. In this character of the Jefferson Scattering Batkins our dear old comedian Mr. William Warren has made himself famous for years. As long ago as I can remember I used to see this play billed at the Museum, and it is played regularly to big houses every year. Whenever there is a hitch of any kind in the theatrical housekeeping all the management has to do is to put this play on the boards; it is dead sure to draw. Every word that Warren utters in the part and every bit of the business we all know by heart, and just when to expect it, but we go to see it year after year with unabated delight, and laugh as heartily at the "speech" which Mr. Batkins has prepared and is always rehearsing; we chuckle at his enmity toward "those Boston clinks"—"cliques" is too much for him—and we are charmed with the agile manner in which this veteran actor of nearly or quite seventy years skips through the dance of high society.

Mrs. Vincent, the "first old woman" of the Museum cast, is quite as popular in her way as Warren himself. She is really very old—certainly in the neighborhood of sixty—and is the fattest, shortest dumpling of a little old woman that ever went on the boards, but she is so comical that it is impossible to look at her without smiling. Taken altogether, they are about as irresistible a pair of comedians as any stage ever boasted, and the only regret one has in regard to them is the thought that in the nature of things they really must die or retire before many years longer, and what in the world shall we do then? There is nobody who could ever take their places.

One of the most pleasing and artistic musical entertainments which I have been to for a long time was that given a day or two ago by Mr. James H. Howe, one of Boston's most promising young pianists, who is a student at the Boston University College of Music. The recital was at Wesleyan Hall, the audience was composed of some of our leading musical people, and the programme was finely made up and was carried out in a manner to do the young musician the greatest credit.

IDA CLARE.

RELIGIOUS NOTES.

A Congregational Church was recently organized by Rev. Robert West in Palestine, Texas.

Father Hughes' subject at St. Francis Xavier's Church to-morrow night is "The Mercy of Mary."

Bishop Robertson is absent from the city, making his annual confirmation tour through the interior of the diocese.

The children of St. Xavier's Parish will receive confirmation Sunday afternoon, Bishop Ryan officiating. Communion service in the morning.

To-morrow morning first Communion will be administered to 145 children in St. Joseph's Church, corner of Eleventh and Biddle streets.

A mission will begin to-morrow at St. Mary's Church. Revs. Francis Halbfass, Augustin, Hensker and Pancratius will be the preachers.

The Missouri Sunday School Convention, Rev. C. L. Goodell, D.D., President, will meet in Louisiana, May 31. An interesting programmed is provided.

"Leaves from a Minister's Diary" will be Dr. Boyd's subject at the Second Baptist Church to-morrow night. Baptismal service will follow the lecture.

Dr. Goodell, of Pilgrim Church, will deliver an address at the anniversary of the American Tract Society in New York City, on the evening of next Wednesday.

Rev. Father O'Shea, the Redemptorist, has returned to the city after four months' absence spent in missionary labor. He is stopping at the Rock Church on Grand avenue.

Archbishop Wood and Bishop Hennessy visited the city last week. The Archbishop was returning from a tour throughout the South. Bishop Hennessy has just returned from Rome.

Bishop Ryan will administer confirmation at high mass at St. Malachy's Church to-morrow. Two hundred children will receive the sacrament. First communion will be given at an earlier mass.

Nine young men, graduates of Yale Theological Seminary, are pledged to go together to Dacotah Territory in the Congregational home missionary work. They will be called the Dacotah band.

There will be a meeting of Congregational Ministers and laymen in Chicago on the 7th, 8th and 9th of June, in behalf of the home missionary work in our country. President Seeley, of Amherst College, will preside, and Dr. Wm. M. Taylor, of New York, will preach the sermon.

PREVAILING FASHIONS.

From the Home Journal.

Broken rainbows fluttering about dimpled chins; sunny heads and swaying draperies, describe pretty nearly the appearances of pretty women at the present time.

From their parasols to their "hozen" they are either all a sparkle or else a glowing glory, which, by the way, does not at all resemble the late lunacy which we suffered and promoted by our staid but positive enthusiasms for neutral tints. Only yesterday we abhorred any hue that did not insist and prove that it had been ripened by time, which being interpreted, means faded into dinginess and worn away into a fully matured shabbiness.

Not that we are fully or wholly decided about all our colors even now, although their hues are so very intense. We appear to have made a parley with ourselves and have accepted ombres as a compromise between the undecided and the positive of all hues. When we find that our eyes long for a certain tint we practice a little private deceit upon our imaginations and our intelligence and give to the color that we desire a reconciling and composing name. For instance, when a certain new and positive quality of blue recently challenged our welcome it was instantly accepted because it bore the name of "Minerva's eye!" We could not disrespect this particular goddess, and here we are with the eye of wisdom and propriety gazing at us from ribbons and flounces, stockings and sunshades, and to confess the truth, we really like the hue, but we wish to have a ready reason which is classic for all our caprices.

The lady chooses her costumes this season to suit her very own self. If it be of black fabric it may be all a-glitter with a cut and a sea jet, combined together, which means that part of it is dull and part of it is shining. Rainbow tints and tones in cut glass may transform the dullest of robes into the gayest and most brilliant of raiment. It may glitter with gold passementerie or polished steel fringes and laces, but glitter it must, and that too in the scarce forgotten face and eyes of our late loves for the mellow, the dull, the faded.

No matter. Changes in the tastes of the citizens are excellent in their consequences to industrial arts. Caprices in our desires whiten the seas with ships and open the secrets of the earth to man. Of course we can not avoid wishing sometimes, in a moaning tone, that these metalic mysteries had been guarded by the fates with greater care. But never mind; we can wear smoked glasses over our eyes and endure it.

It is prophesied that we are to have a cool summer which is partially consoling. The sparkling of many crystals and the flaunting of many glowing colors would have added new terrors to the head of those dog days which are further on in the season.

A shirred robe is the prevailing charmed costume for many eyes. It has an almost endless amount of this ornament upon it. Soft foulards, men's mid-summer cachmeres, albatros cloths, surahs and other flexible and light textured fabrics are chosen for this sort of dexterous gathering. The top of the sleeve, also its bottom in some instances, is a mass of shirring, both above and below the elbow, leaving a puff only for the bending of the arm. A yoke is of shirring, also the side pannels to the skirt and the tops of flounces. A fan-shaped upper part of the drapery of the front, just below the belt, and also at any and all others parts of the dress where such treatment is possible, is considered "none too much of a pretty thing."

Gounod's Artistic Failure.

From the New York Mail.

Le Tribut de Zamora, Gounod's last opera, is his last opera indeed. With all the respect due to the man who wrote La Reine de Saba, Faust, Mireille, Romeo et Juliette, Le Medecin malgre lui, Philemon et Baucis, and so many small masterpieces, like his numerous collections of songs, that model of grace, the "Serenade," the spirituelle invention of writing a melody to an accompaniment, as he did with the Prelude of Bach, etc.—in fact, with the regard for a man having so many undisputable claims to public esteem, it is impossible to speak of the Tribut de Zamora otherwise than with deep regret, deploring the barrenness, the emptiness, the total absence of ideas or inspiration, with nothing grand, nothing new, nothing original; the already famous duo between Hermosa and Xaima, claiming as the oasis in this desert, that even, resembling a well-known phrase. I have no doubt, says a writer in the London World, that the orchestration, which cannot be learned from the vocal score, offers numerous points of interest; a master like Gounod does not bring out so laborious a work—I am told it was engraved and re-engraved four times—without attracting the special attention of the connoisseur by his deep knowledge of orchestral effects; but that cannot save an opera; and if the manager can render it attractive only by an immense outlay on costumes and scenery, as they did in Paris, it is not exactly fair to call the opera a success.

LEGAL.

Trustees' Sales.

TRUSTEE'S SALE—Whereas, Mary Clemens, Mary C. Morse, Henrietta T. Knowles and her trustee, Sarah L. Morse, by their deed dated October 29, 1874, recorded in the Recorder's office of the city of St. Louis in book 501, page 372, conveyed to the undersigned the following described real estate situated in the City of St. Louis, Missouri, to-wit: A lot of ground in block numbered four hundred and sixty-two of said City of St. Louis and described as follows: Beginning at a point in the north front line of Hickory street eighty-nine and one-half (89½) feet east of the eastern line of Ham street eighty feet to the north line of said Hickory street, and thence westwardly with said north line of Hickory street twenty-two feet and six-twelfths (22 6-12) to the point of beginning.

Also, a certain lot of ground situated on the north side of Chouteau ave., in block number four hundred and thirty of said city, and having a front of thirty-five feet by a depth of one hundred and forty feet to an alley, beginning at a point on the north line of Chouteau avenue, distant eastwardly fifty feet from the eastern line of Barlow street; thence running eastwardly along the northern line of Chouteau avenue thirty-five feet to the western line of a lot of Charles Wiggins; thence northwardly and along said Wiggins' western line one hundred and forty feet to an alley ten feet wide; thence along the southern line of said alley thirty-five feet to the eastern line of a lot of Margaret Buell; thence southwardly and along said eastern line of Margaret Buell's lot one hundred and forty feet to the place of beginning; bounded south by Chouteau avenue, north by an alley, west by property of Margaret Buell and east by property of Chas. Buell. And, whereas, the said conveyance was made to secure a certain note described therein; and, whereas the note has become due and remains unpaid, therefore at the request of the holder of said note and in pursuance of the power in said deed contained, notice is hereby given that I will, on offer and expose for sale, at public vendue, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. of that day, to the highest and best bidder, for cash, all and singular, the real estate above described at the east front door of the Court House in the city of St. Louis.

JOHN M. KRUM,
Trustee.

D. P. Harrison, W. T. Harrison and M. W. O'Bannon.
Attachment

It appearing from the return of the sheriff to the writ herein that the defendants cannot be found in the city of St. Louis, on motion of plaintiff by attorney it is ordered by the court that M. W. O'Bannon, one of said defendants, be notified that a civil action has been commenced against him and the other above named defendants for the sum of one hundred and seventy-five dollars on account of a certain promissory note dated February 25th, 1858, by which defendants promised to pay W. B. Napton, twelve months after date for value received, one hundred and seventy-five dollars, which said note was delivered to said W. B. Napton, and by said W. B. Napton afterwards endorsed, assigned and delivered to C. M. Napton, who afterwards endorsed, assigned and delivered the same to plaintiff; that during the year 1863 and within ten years from the date when said note fell due said defendant, M. W. O'Bannon, left the State of Missouri and removed to the State of Kentucky, and has continued to reside there ever since, and has been continuously absent from the State of Missouri since said year 1863; that said note was executed in the State of Missouri, where all the other parties herein mentioned resided at the time, and have continued to reside, and that said note is past due, and still remains unpaid; and that their property has been attached; and unless they appear at the term of this court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis on the first Monday of June next, and on or before the third day thereof, answer to the action aforesaid, according to law, judgment will be rendered against said defendants as confessed and the property attached herein sold to satisfy the same.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a newspaper printed and published in the city of St. Louis.

Lizzie Terry,
vs.
Frank J. Terry

It appearing to the court from the petition and affidavit heretofore filed herein that the defendant has absconded and absented himself from his usual place of abode in this State so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him, wherefore on motion of plaintiff by attorney,

It is ordered that said defendant be notified that a civil action has been commenced against him, the object and general nature of which is to obtain a decree of divorce from the bonds of matrimony existing between the plaintiff and defendant, on the ground that said defendant wholly disregarding his duties as the husband of the plaintiff, has absented himself without a reasonable cause from plaintiff for the space of one year and over, to-wit: ever since the 16th day of November, 1879, and left her without any support, to take care of herself as best she could.

And unless he appear at the term of this Court to be begun and held at the city of St. Louis, on the first Monday of June next, and on or before the third day thereof answer the plaintiff's petition, the same will be taken against him as confessed.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a newspaper printed and published in the city of Louis.

A true copy from the record.

Edward J. Gay
vs.
Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer and Albert L. Aubin.

Before John M. Young, Justice of the Peace for the Fifth District, composed of the First and Seventeenth Wards of the City of St. Louis, Mo. The constable having returned that Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer, defendants in the above entitled suit, are not found, on motion of plaintiff by his attorney, it is ordered by the justice that said defendants, Auguste Fischer and Emma Fischer, be notified that a civil action of unlawful detainer has been commenced against them and the other defendants (subtenants under Auguste Fischer), the object and general nature of which is to obtain possession of all that certain parcel of ground described as a lot of ground in block 105 of the City of St. Louis, having a front of one hundred and fourteen 54-100 feet on Fourth street by a depth of one hundred and thirty-five feet, being the northwest corner of Fourth and Myrtle streets, in the City of St. Louis, State of Missouri, together with judgment for 330 33-100 dollars back rent and $166 66 per month from 15th April, 1881, as damages for unlawfully withholding said premises; being the same property formerly leased to Auguste Fischer by said plaintiff; and unless they appear before me on Wednesday, the 11th day of May, 1881, at the hour of 7 o'clock a. m. (three hours grace given), and show cause why judgment for possession, rent and damages should not be rendered against them, the same will be so rendered.

And it is further ordered that a copy hereof be published according to law in the St. Louis POST-DISPATCH, a daily newspaper published within the City of St. Louis, Missouri.

ONLY A TRAMP.

Written for the Post-Dispatch.

Only a tramp
Under the wheels of the moving car;
Mangled and bleeding, bruised and torn—
Nobody knows who his loved ones are;
All hearts seem of their pity shorn.
Mangled and damp
Is the wounded tramp—
Mangled and damp as he moaning lies
On the pounded stone 'tween the railroad ties.

"Send for a doctor!" somebody said;
"Send for a doctor!" Nobody goes.
"Better the coroner." "Lift up his head!"
One spurns the poor, crushed form with his toes.
The tangled mesh
Of his hair is fresh
With the blood and gore of his wounded head;
Send for the coroner ere he is dead.

Only a worthless tramp is slain,
By the driving wheels of the moving train,
And lying motionless in the rain,
Motionless? No, there's a painful thrill
Of writhing agony o'er him still;
A weary opening of the eyes,
And a moan of agony from the lips,
While the pitiless rain drops from the skies
Mix with the blood as it slowly drips
From the mangled remnant of an arm—

But listen! I think he tried to speak,
Or was it only a gasp for breath?
He tries again, but his voice is weak,
Yet I heard distinctly the one word—
"death."

"Mother!"—his voice is very low—
"The message will tell you who I am—
I started—I wanted to see her so—
As soon as they brought me the telegram.

"But no, I never will see her now,
For—Oh, this horrible, piercing pain!—
For the damps of death are upon my brow,
And she is dying in dear old Maine.

"And"—moaning—"just tell her I found dear Joe
And nursed him tenderly till he died;
'Twas the yellow fever he had, you know,
But I never for a moment left his side.

"I buried him, too. I was all alone;
I made the coffin with these own hands;
Ah! I see there's but one I can call my own!
We'll both be buried in far off lands.

"I buried Joe, but I had to stay
And work, for I owed some debts down there;
I earned the money I had to pay,
And paid it all with a thankful prayer.

"I paid it all, but that very day
I got the terrible word again
That my dear old mother, so far away,
Was surely dying in dear old Maine.

"I started—I thought I'd beat my way,
For I had no money and had to go;—
But—Mother! don't look for your Will, to-day;
I—Yes, I'll remain here—with you—dear Joe!"

A chill, a shudder, a final gasp,
The one hand closed in a final clasp,
And his soul had fled,
And the tramp was dead,
The penniless, mangled tramp was dead.

THE STORY OF A COUPE.

From the French of "La Vie Parisienne."

Every one in Paris knows Darley, the livery stable keeper. His establishment is now half a century old, and he furnishes the Fauborg St. Germain with all the carriages they hire. Many of the upper ten have their homes in the country, and never take their horses to Paris. Therefore Monsieur de Merisi, immediately after his arrival, went to see Darley to engage a coupe.

After the usual salutations, the following dialogue began:

"Well, Darley, I want a handsome coupe, with one horse; now how much will it be?"

"What will the amount of work be, sir?"

"Oh not very much. I never want it before five in the afternoon. I pay a few visits, and take a drive in the park. In the evening I want it to take me to the theater, or home from the club."

Darley reflectively scratched his head.

"Well, how much a month do you want for it?"

"Hum—let me see. For a new coupe and a good horse, in May, the busiest month—seven hundred and fifty francs is cheap."

"What! from five o'clock to midnight, or one o'clock in the morning?"

"You must remember that during the remainder of the time I can't use either the coupe or horse."

"Well, let us say seven hundred francs; that's handsome pay for so little work?"

"All right," grumbled Darley. "Same place, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'll send it round to-morrow."

An hour later Darley received, with the utmost respect, another important customer, Madame de Belroy.

"Well, madame, what can I do for you? Carriage, eh? Well let me recommend a landau—in it the madame's toilet can be seen to the best advantage."

"No, sir; as you see, I am am yet in mourning and came to Paris only to settle some affairs."

"But madame will pardon me if I say that in a coupe her beauty—"

"No, Monsieur Darley, I am a widow, and I live retired. I want a carriage only for my shopping and such things; a coupe will do me—a single coupe with one horse, elegantly lined, but dark. How much will it be per month?"

"That depends upon the work."

"Oh, it will not be much. At nine o'clock I will drive to mass; after breakfast I shall have calls to make and shopping to do; at three o'clock I shall drive home. This is all, for I never go out in the evening."

"Well, madame, during May, our busiest month, the price is seven hundred francs a month."

"Too much, I think. It seems to me that six hundred francs—"

"Come, madame, I have something that will just suit you; something very elegant, but quiet; lined with silk—"

"You tempt me. Well, be it so. Send it around to-morrow morning."

And so it happened that Monsieur de Merisi and Madame de Belroy had the same coupe by the month.

* * * * * *

The gentleman found this out very soon. One day he saw in one of the coupe pockets a note book, with gray enameled cover and gold border, in which were several cards. On the back of some of these were memoranda, such as calls to be made, impressions, reflections, etc. He examined a card, and read on one side.

MADAME DE BELROY.

On the other side, in a delicate feminine handwriting, were these penciled lines:

After Mass to the Sisters.
Then to the Mission for the Poor.
At half-past twelve, my lawyer.
Then to the cemetery.
Then to St. Thomas Church.
At two o'clock see grandmamma.
At three o'clock, Julius.
Now I feel that he is mine.

The coupe stopped at the club.

"She must be a saint," thought Merisi; "but who is this Julius?"

He replaced the note book where he had found it, and, alighting, said to the coachman:

"Some one left a note-book in the coupe. Consequently, some one must have used it."

The coachman's confusion showed Merisi that he was not mistaken. The name of Madame de Belroy was not unknown to him, but he had lived so long away from Paris that he couldn't remember who she was. As soon as he had entered the club-room he sought for information.

"De Bassino," said he, "do you know Madame Belroy?"

"Yes," replied that gentleman, "she that was little De St. Saone. Poor Belroy died last year, and she is plunged in grief. It was a great loss."

"Who? Belroy?"

"No, his wife, who is charming, but always invisible. Society sees her no more."

Merisi now waited anxiously for another find in the coupe. But, alas for a whole week neither note-book nor anything else was forgotten. But the little "saint," who spent her time so piously occupied his mind incessantly. So he said one evening to the coachman:

"I have discovered that my coupe is also used by a Madame de Belroy. Do not deny it. I am sure. Now, I am curious to see this lady. Tell me where I might do so."

"Well, sir, every morning at nine o'clock I take her to mass at the Church of St. Philippe."

Next morning Monsieur de Merisi was punctual, and saw his saint at her devotions. It seemed to him that never before had he seen such a lovely face. She was still in mourning. She wore a small bonnet of black tulle, which framed her lovely blonde hair; a long vail of black gauze hung down on the train of her dress, which was of dead-black silk, trimmed with black surah. In her black-gloved hands were a missal full of saints' pictures and illuminated texts.

Merisi paid little attention to the mass.

"Ah," thought he, "if I had known there was on earth such a woman—beautiful, young, modest and shunning society, oh! I would have adored her. How gracefully she makes the sign of the cross. She is a little saint. But that Julius—who the deuce can he be?"

From this moment Monsieur de Merisi hung upon her steps. He saw her every morning at the Church of St. Philippe, and followed her coupe in another one. Her route was nearly always the same: To her grandmother's, to the parish priest's, to the Sisters of Charity, to her lawyer's office, and a long stay at a house on the Boulevard St. Michel.

At last De Merisi came to the conclusion that he was a fool. He was occupied with Madame de Belroy to such a degree that he neglected for her the affairs for which he had come to Paris. There was only one thing to be done—to ask permission to be presented to her, and pay his addresses. His state of mind was becoming intolerable. So one day, at the club, he said to Monsieur de Villeperte, who was nicknamed the "Elite Directory:"

"Do you know the Belroy family, Villeperte?"

"Very well, indeed; but there's not many left—only the grandmother and her daughter-in-law."

"Could you present me?"

"Hum—not easily; the grandmother is eighty years old: the young widow is nearly always in the country, and lives very retired since the death of her husband."

"Come, now—as a great favor to me."

"Well, I'll see."

"But at once, because I'm going away."

"Well, I'll go to-morrow and see the grandmother."

"Are you acquainted with the young widow, too?"

"Known her ever since she was born, my dear boy; a handsome, distingushed and graceful woman."

"And she is—hum—hum—never been any scandal about her, has there?"

Villeperte arose with such precipitation that he overturned his chair.

"What do you mean?" he roared. "Madame de Belroy! Why, not a whisper has been heard—"

Outwardly discomfited, but inwardly rejoicing, Merisi abased himself before his indignant friend, and finally succeeded in making his peace.

The next morning he again followed the charming widow, who spent her time as usual. The stay which she made at the Boulevard St. Michel, however, seemed to him a little longer than usual. And it seemed to him when she came out, that her toilet was a little disarranged. Her hair was disheveled, her hat awry, and her collar rumpled. But after some moments of jealous rage, the answer of Monsieur de Villeperte came to his mind, and he quickly repented of his distrust.

The grandmother had been very amiable, and had given Monsieur de Villeperte permission to present his friend. This was soon done, and Monsieur de Merisi fell deeper in love than before, if it were possible. The old lady befriended him, too. He was her partner at the card table, and used to read to her newspapers and the newest of novels. He was a clever fellow, was De Merisi.

But he was a suspicious fellow, too, and he retained the coupe, hoping again to find the note-book which had so deeply interested him. "Julius" struck in his memory. But his researches were far from successful. Being more and more captivated by Madame de Belroy, he at last dared to declare his intention, and was strongly supported by the grandmother. Madame de Belroy did not say "No," and so the engagement began.

One day De Merisi leaped into his coupe to make a purchase required by his new situation—an engagement ring of fabulous value and exquisite taste. The gray note-book was there. He opened it. The memoranda had changed very little?

"The lawyer's; the priest's; the milliner's; flowers; bring Julius his shako."

A shako! Not one of the friends of the Belroy family was in the army; what could it mean? With feverish haste he turned the card over. Alas! he found too easily the meaning:

"He looks adorable with his new shako, How silly I am! He would not leave my room last night, and I pretended to be angry?"

Tingling with jealous rage and shame, Merisi ordered the coachman to drive him immediately to Madame de Belroy's house. She was waiting for him at her window.

"Why, how funny!" she exclaimed, "you are in my coupe! How did it happen, and what does it mean?"

Merisi was deadly pale, so angered was he. He choked with rage as he endeavored to find words to upbraid her.

Suddenly an unexpected visitor made his appearance. It was a little boy, four or five years old, adorned with a shako and saber. So frightened was the little fellow by the agitated air of Monsieur de Merisi that he sought refuge in the folds of Madame de Belroy's dress.

"Why, Julius," said she patting his cheek, "what is the matter?"

"Julius!" roared the discomfited lover, "is this Julius?"

"Yes, he is my godson, a poor orphan. By and by I shall tell you all about his mother, and the trouble I had to be appointed his guardian, and how I used to go and see him at the Boulevard St. Michel, where he lived. Now, Julius, go and kiss Monsieur de Merisi, who, I am sure, will be very kind to you—if he loves me truly."

Monsieur de Merisi did love her truly. He loved her so truly that he would have died rather than tell her that he had doubted her.

And she does not know it to this day.

The Greatest Living Actress.

H. Watterson in Courier Journal.

About ten years ago there came hither from the West—that much-abused region, but for whose contributions grass would grow today in the streets of New York—an obscure young woman. She was dismally poor, but from the start she defied the world, the flesh and the devil. She knew she had genius and power, and she struck right out from the shoulder. She hit the old moss-grown Knickerbockers squarely on the nose. She took Wall street by the ear. She tweaked the beak of the critics. She forced her way; and to-day, in spite of them all, she carries the houses away from Bernhardt. Clara Morris, of course. I saw her play "Raymonde" at the Union Square last night. A gentleman not wholly unconnected with the theatrical business told me in advance it was bound to be a failure. The house Monday night was not reassuring. Next day's papers dam'd the business with the faint praise of predetermined extermination. Each night that business picked up. Last night was an overflow. I went to be bored. I came away more impressed that I had been when I saw her Camille, with the notion that this is immeasurably the greatest woman now living on the stage. The public sees this because it feels it. But the New York critics, who know too much to know anything very well, are afraid to say it because they think some simpering fool will question their infallibility.

Some of our exchanges, judging from their correspondence, believe the wheat product of the country will be as large as ever this season, the increased acreage balancing the shorter crop per acre. Secretary Chamberlain, of our State Agricultural Society, estimates a large deficit of wheat for Ohio.

SOIL CULTIVATION.

Practical Suggestions for the Husbandman and Hints for Housekeepers.

Country Life—Fruits for Canning Purposes—Transplanting Vegetables—Salt for Animals—Grape Culture—Household Receipts.

All will concede that each one, on this earth of ours, has a right to an opinion. We have our own ideas concerning the "charms of farm life." We are of opinion that the pleasantest life is that lived on the farm. One has hardships to endure and trials to bear wherever he may be placed. We know for one thing that the country air and surroundings are much more conducive to health and strength. If those farmers' wives, who complain of the hardness of their lot, could exchange places with their city sisters, no doubt they would be more eager to go back to their country homes and their work. But they do not work without intermission, nor do they all sit in "cool, airy rooms." Through six days of each week they must toil at or see to the washing, ironing, cooking, baking, churning, patching and sewing, etc. Very little time is ever found for reading or recreation by many of them. As a general thing, at sunset the day's work is done. There is a short time for resting, for sitting in a "cool room," if they choose. This little bit of quiet resting is heartily enjoyed and highly appreciated. While the farmer and his family take their needful rest in sleep, their interest is still going on. The trees and plants and all the crops are growing and increasing, silently yet surely. When city folks stop working for the day their work stops; and they must commence in the morning just where they left off the day before. So the farmer has an advantage in this respect.

FRUITS FOR CANNING.

Since the preservation of fruits by the process of canning has become so general, it is desirable to know which varieties are best adapted to the purpose. As a rule, those whose taste is sweet or insipid are not desirable, while those that have a decided flavor are to be preferred. Black cap raspberries, sweet cherries and blueberries are among the poorest small fruits for canning, as their flavor is insipid when they are in their best estate, and is impaired by the operation of heating. Strawberries, though most delicious when fresh, become somewhat insipid when cooked. Red raspberries are excellent when canned, but they should, to preserve their flavor and aroma, be put up as soon as they are gathered. Blackberries are inferior to red raspberries, but if canned shortly after they are picked they will come out in very good condition and be well relished. Red and white currants contain too many seeds to be very desirable. It is better to extract their juice and to convert it into jelly. All who relish black currants when fresh will like them after they have been canned. They form an excellent sauce without further cooking, and are in good condition to use in pies and tarts. Gooseberries, if gathered before their skins become tough, are excellent after they are canned. They are especially desirable for eating during the spring, when the appetite craves acid fruits. Early Richmond cherries, all things considered, are the best of all the small fruits for canning. If managed with skill they will retain the color, flavor and aroma they had when freshly picked from the tree. Most kinds of plums are good, but owing to their size and the firmness of their flesh they require more cooking. Of the sweet fruits there is none better than pears. Even the inferior varieties are excellent when canned. The quince is admirably adapted for canning purposes, being almost the only kind of fruit that is improved by cooking. Being scarce and expensive, there is economy in putting them in the same jars that contain apples or pears of inferior flavor. The larger varieties of crab-apples form a valuable addition to the stock of canned fruits.

"SALT IS GOOD."

Centuries before the Sermon on the Mount was delivered and even until now the value of salt has been recognized by all inteligent beings. Wild birds and animals traveled long distances in search of it, and often tarried long in the places where it abounds. Health is impaired unless salt is contained in the food of which we partake. It is at once the cheapest and most wholesome substance that can be employed for the preservation of meat and fish. Most antiseptics are injurious to health, but salt is conducive to it. It is more desired as a condiment than all other substances whatsoever; the appetite for salt is universal. It is desired by the occupant of the cradle and easy-chair. Its value as a fertilizer has been acknowledged from the earliest historic times. Since these facts are generally acknowledged, it appears strange that so many farmers are exceedingly parsimonious in regard to the use of salt. Every year we hear of persons attempting to keep a herd of cattle or a flock of sheep during the entire season without allowing them any salt. Many deal out salt to stock as grudgingly as if it was costly as sugar. A large proportion of farmers allow their milch cows, and other animals kept near the house, to partake of salt but once a week. If they have stock in a distant pasture the salting time occurs only once or twice a month. When the animals receive it they eat more than is beneficial for them. There is no good reason why stock of all kinds should not be allowed to gratify their appetite for salt at any time they choose. The animals know better than their owners do when they require it. Slight ingenuity is needed to place salt in a situation where it will be protected from the rain and snow and where stock can have access to it at all times. With rare exceptions animals will eat a little salt every day if they have the opportunity to do so. The cost of salt, at the ordinary degrees of purity, for all the stock a farmer keeps, is trifling, and it should be furnished without stint to animals of all kinds and at all seasons of the year.

TRANSPLANTING VEGETABLES.

It is the common practice of gardeners to sow the seeds of cabbages, cauliflowers, tomatoes, head-lettuce, and celery in hot-beds cold-frames, or borders, and to remove the plants after they have attained a considerable size to the places where they are to remain until they mature. The seeds of nearly all other kinds of vegetables, however, are planted in the drills, or hills, where they are expected to attain their full size. Of late some persons have advocated starting Lima beans, melons and squashes in hot-beds while the weather is cold in the spring, and removing the plants after the soil and atmosphere become warm; they place the seeds on pieces of inverted turf, or in small paper or wood boxes such as are used for holding berries. It is held that these plants require a longer period for attaining full growth than they can obtain if the seeds are implanted in the open ground after the weather becomes sufficiently warm to insure germination and protection from the frost. It is evident that fashion has much to do in deciding which kinds of vegetables should be planted in the places where they are to grow, and which should be started elsewhere and transplanted when they are of considerable size. Till recently nearly every person thought it essential to start tomato plants in a hot-bed or cold-frames, and to remove them to the places where they were to produce fruit. Some one finally discovered that so-called "volunteer" plants were more hardy than those raised in hot-beds; that they grew more stocky and produced better fruit. Accordingly, many of late have planted tomato seed in their places where the plants were desired, taking care to thin them out to the number required. Some at present advise the same course in relation to cabbages and cauliflowers. On the other hand, many persons now sow beet and turnip seed in nursery beds and remove the plants when of sufficient size to the rows where they are to grow. They declare that the finest vegetables can only be produced by this system of management which they believe to be the cheapest as well as the best. They state that it saves weeding and thinning out the plants and insures the production of roots of nearly uniform size and quality. Those who practice the system of transplanting do not prepare the ground for the reception of plants till it is time to remove them. It is then free from weeds and in complete order.

IMPROVEMENTS IN COTTON RAISING.

Cotton is planted, cultivated and harvested in a more primitive manner than any other field crop raised in this country. The ground on which it is planted is generally plowed with a "full tongue." The fertilizers and seed are dropped by hand and all the cultivation done by means of implements drawn by mules or operated by hand. The picking is done by hand, and no labor-saving machine is employed till it becomes necessary to separate the lint from the seed. Labor is scarce in many sections of the South at the present time, and is unreliable in all parts of it. On this account ways are being devised for dispensing with hard work as far as possible. It is found that the seed can be dropped by a drill or planter if the lint is removed from it, as it can be by the employment of chemicals. The machine which drops the cleaned seed also covers it, thus rendering the operation of planting comparatively easy. The experiment has recently been made of planting the seed in hills, forming check-rows, instead of in drills, and the result is very satisfactory. When planted in this way it can be cultivated like corn, the plow or other implement running on both sides of the hills. By this means little work with the hand-hoe is required. A machine has been invented for picking cotton which gives promise of ultimate success. It is stated that it would work admirably if all the bolls matured at the same time.

GRAPES.

I marvel everybody does not provide for at least a few grapes. Grapes are excellent fruit and easily cultivated, and the vines are ornamental when properly cared for. Every owner who has even a rod or two of spare ground should have at least a few vines; yet I presume there are thousands of your readers who have not a vine in their possession. Almost any housekeeper can have a grape arbor, which, if well kept, is a "thing of beauty," as well as of comfort and profit to the owners. I have an arbor between my dwelling and barn. It is fifty feet long, nine feet wide and eight feet high, of good locust posts tied together at the top with inch boards, slightly arched, and with three strands of fence wire on each side. Over this we carefully train the branches of about twenty vines; and when these are in full leaf the rays of the sun are almost entirely excluded. The arbor affords a grateful shade in summer and is quite ornamental. The latter use alone remunerates for keeping it in order, to say nothing of the bushels of luscious fruit it yields. Any one who has a few vines each of the three or four hardy varieties will have fruit in abundance almost every year.

Notes for Spring.

The peach crop seems to have suffered far more from the winter in the Southern than in the Northern States.

It is said that over 80,000 buffaloes have been killed in Montana alone, within the last six months, for their hides simply, which are worth from $2 25 to $2 75 each. What criminal waste and slaughter!

Large amounts of barley is annually raised in Claifornia, and transported 3,000 miles to be malted in Chicago. Barley is commonly considered a native of the North, but such are the capacities of soil and climate in the Golden State that the cereal flourishes well in a semi-tropic latitude. Barley is one of the most remunerative crops that can be raised on good land, if well attended to.

It is stated that the proprietors of the new beet sugar factory at Schenectady, N. Y., expect to clear the cost of their establishment, $150,000, in four years, from their regular profits. The farmers have contracted to sell them beets at about $80 per acre, or $4 per ton, a price the growers will probably not withstand more than one season. It would be better policy for the factory owners to give more for the beets and be longer in getting their money back.

In trimming our peach trees, this spring, the disagreeable discovery was made that one-fourth of them were destroyed—killed by the hard winter. But it is some consolation to discover that there will be fruit on some of the heavier sorts of peach trees. Cherry trees have also suffered. Farmers and others should adopt the plan of planting a few choice fruit trees annually, not forgetting the peach, which is liable to casualty from so many causes. The systematic cultivator of peaches is sure to succeed.

A writer in the Country Gentleman, in showing the uniform profits of farming to be fully 10 per on the investment of land and stock, for the last fifty years, concludes: "Farming is confessed to be a slow way of making a fortune, but the figures which we have been looking at prove that the capital in farming is a good investment. When we want to set our business in contrast with the money-making occupations, we make another issue and plead for safety and permanence of the business; and we try to show how a family can be rich without money, and how they can have the best thing which money can get—a home."

Indiana has a capital road law, which her older and nearest sister States would do well to copy. Local Supervisors have been abolished, and township Superintendents, chosen for two years, substituted, who take entire direction of the road and bridge making and improvements. A capitation tax of $2 per annum is levied on every ablebodied man between the ages of 21 and 50 years inclusive, which the citizen may "work out," and Superintendents receive $2 per diem. Many of the features are decided improvements on the old law, and good roads—those indispensable promoters of agricultural and social thrift—are likely to result from it.

Planting potatoes, sowing oats and preparing for corn planting all come at once, this spring. It is safe to say that more work of these sorts has been precipitated into the fortnight last past than was ever done before in two weeks in this country. Of the better kind of new potatoes there will be vast quantities planted, and with a favorable season and due attention to culture and the Colorados there will be large returns. We notice a little faintheartedness on the part of many farmers in regard to oat seeding, but our advice has been, put in your usual area and trust to the Lord of the harvest. Your oats will make a capital soiling crop if it should ripen slowly. There is yet abundance of time and opportunity to plant more corn than ever, and it is more than probable the warm weather may be protracted into the fall fully as long as it was delayed this spring in its coming.

Household Recipes.

PINEAPPLE JAM.—Peel, grate, and weigh the apple. Put pound to pound of pineapple sugar. Boil it in a preserving kettle thirty or forty minutes.

ASPARAGUS SAUCE.—Boil two pounds of tender fresh-cut asparagus in very little water, with a small portion of salt, or what is better still, steam the asparagus without water until it is tender, chop it very fine, mix it with the yolks of five, and whites of three well-beaten eggs, and two tablespoonfuls of sweet cream, fry and serve quiet hot.

RASPBERRY JAM.—To every quart of ripe raspberries, allow a pound of the best loaf-sugar. Put sugar and berries into a pan, and let them stand two or three hours. Then boil them in a porcelain kettle, taking off the scum carefully. When no more scum rises, mash them and boil them to smooth marmalade. When cold put them in glass tumblers.

BEEFSTEAK PICKLED.—Lay a steak in a pudding dish with slices of onions, a few cloves, whole pepper, salt and bay leaf, a sprig of thyme, one of marjoram, and some parsley, add oil and tarragon vinegar in equal parts, just to come up to the steak, and let it steep in this for about twelve hours, turning it occasionally; then either broil it or fry it in butter, and serve with mashed potatoes. It may also be slightly fried in butter, and then stewed with a little common stock, and served with piquante sauce.

VEAL STEW.—Cut four pounds of veal into strips three inches long and one inch thick; peel twelve large potatoes, and cut them into slices one inch thick; spread a layer of veal on the bottom of the pot, sprinkle in a little salt and pepper, then a layer of potatoes, then a layer of veal seasoned as before. Use up the veal thus; over the last layer of veal put a layer of slices of salt pork, and over the whole a layer of potatoes. Pour in water till it rises an inch over the whole; cover it close, heat it fifteen minutes, and simmer it an hour.

PRESERVED ORANGES.—Take any number of oranges with rather more than their weight in white sugar. Slightly grate the oranges, and score them round and round with a knife, but not cut very deep. Put them in cold water for three days, changing the water two or three times a day. Tie them up in a cloth, boil them until they are soft enough for the head of a pin to penetrate the skin. While they are boiling, place the sugar on the fire, with rather more than half a pint of water to each pound; let it boil for a minute or two, then strain it through muslin. Put the oranges into the syrup till it jellies and is of a yellow color. Try the syrup by putting some to cool. It must not be too stiff. The syrup need not cover the oranges, but they must be turned, so that each part gets thoroughly done.

"Sir Joseph Porter."

From the Philadelphia Times.

William H. Smith, who, the cable announces, has bought Millais' portrait of Beaconsfield for $1,000, is an instance of rare political fidelity. Smith was the Secretary of the Navy, or First Lord of the Admiralty, as the post is called in England. He was one of Disraeli's discoveries and his administration was about the only one that reflected credit upon his Ministry. His rise was a surprise and a not altogether agreeable one to the high caste members of the Tory party. He began life as a newspaper vender. His fine business abilities soon made much of a narrow opening. He now controls all sale of newspapers and periodicals on every railway in the British Isles. He controls the circulation of all the great journals to some extent and hence is a power. He first entered politics in 1873 and electrified the Tories by defeating John Stuart Mill for the Westminister district, where he owns large properties. His elevation to the Admiralty struck England with surprise and delight. He was the original of the First Lord in "Pinafore," and when all England was laughing at the satire he went to the theater and laughed heartily at the travesty, and was said to have often been heard humming the air which recounts the promotion of the First Lord for polishing up the handle of the big front door. He adored Beaconsfield and was a tower of strength to that eccentric statesman. His riches were counted on in every close constituency to carry the Ministerial candidate through, and until the tidal wave came in 1880 he rarely failed to pull his partisans through. Like most English members, he is a poor speaker, and the death of his friend and chief will probably keep him back in the party. There was considerable surprise manifested when Disraeli retired that he didn't send Smith up to the Lords as a peer, where he would have found another rich Smith, a man who owns a whole quarter of London—the Duke of Westminster.

The Cost of Fashion.

From the New York Sun.

Among the fashionable people the dressing during the last winter was enormously expensive. The season was unusually gay; that is, there were evening entertainments on a grand scale in constant succession; and the demand for wardrobes of various and original designs was great beyond precedent. The costumes, indeed, were too expensive, and the whole business of society has been pushed to such an extreme of costly magnificence that there must be a reaction. Already the current has begun to set toward simplicity. The rage for house decoration, for bric-a-brac, and for elegant furniture has gone so far that people are getting tired of it, and now we find them stripping their drawing-rooms of superfluous articles once highly prized, lowering the tones of their colors and relieving them of cumbersome hangings. There is always the danger that you may make the frame of your picture so gorgeous that it will distract attention from the painting itself. You can so crowd your rooms with strong and brilliant colors that, dress them ever so beautifully, your guests will seem mean by comparison.

LIST OF LETTERS

Remaining in the Post-Office at St. Louis, Mo., May 7, 1881.

Persons calling for letters in the following list will please say they are advertised, otherwise they may not receive them.

Free delivery of letters by carriers at the residence of owners, may be secured by observing the following rules:

First—Direct letters plainly to the street and number of the house.

Second—Head letters with the writer's full address, including street and number and request answer to be directed accordingly.

Third—Letters to strangers or transient visitors in the town or city, whose special address may be unknown, should be marked in the left hand corner with the word "Transient."

Fourth—Place the postage stamp on the upper right-hand corner and leave space between the stamp and direction for postmarking without interfering with the writing.
